

McKoin Is Released Under $5,000 Bond In Mer Rouge Case

Witnesses Identify Bodies of Lake Victims in First Day of Murder Hearing.

DANIEL RECOGNIZES
HIS SON'S WATCH

Touching Scene Enacted as Keepsake to "Soldier Boy" Is Shown to the Court.

BOND FIXED AT $5,000.
Bastrop, La., January 5.—Judge Odum announced tonight that he had fixed Dr. McKoin's bond at $5,000 which he furnished and was released. It was stated by Judge Odum that the charge against Dr. McKoin was the same as that originally made against him when he was arrested in Baltimore, that of murder. His release on bond, Judge Odum said, was on recommendation of the attorney general.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Bastrop, La., January 5.—Dr. B. M. McKoin, former mayor of the village of Mer Rouge, arrested in Baltimore December 26 on a charge of murder in connection with the slaying of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richards, masked band victims, returned to Morehouse parish this morning and conferred with A. V. Coco, state attorney general.

McKoin Released.
Dr. McKoin left with his attorneys immediately after the conference with the attorney general and, it was stated, would return to his home in Monroe pending decision as to the amount of bond to be required. After the conference, Mr. Coco announced that an agreement had been reached for the release of Dr. McKoin with the understanding that he would furnish bond to insure that he remain within the jurisdiction of the Louisiana authorities, the amount of the bond to be determined by Judge Fred L. Odum, of the district court.

IDENTIFY BODIES.
Bastrop, La., January 5.—The state of Louisiana, through the state attorney general, tonight had set up the ground work of its investigation into masked band outlaws in Morehouse parish—the identification through half a dozen witnesses by trinkets and bits of clothing, of two headless and mutilated bodies thrown to the surface of Lake Lafourche by a mysterious dynamite explosion as those of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richards, missing Mer Rouge citizens.

Identification of the bodies was the first move in an open hearing which, it is promised, will culminate in one of the most sensational exposures of masked band depredations ever unfolded. The slaying of Daniel and Richards has been referred to by Governor John M. Parker, of Louisiana, at whose direction the hearing inaugurated today was undertaken, as "klan murders."

J. L. Daniel, father of Watt Daniel, made the most positive identification.

Fondles Keepsake.
Fondling the battered case of a wrist watch the aged man declared it a keepsake given to his "boy" when he "went to war."

The watch, with bits of clothing, was removed from one of the bodies. It was testified, when they were taken from Lake Lafourche.

Identify Clothing.
J. L. McIlwain, a Mer Rouge merchant, another witness, identified fragments of the trousers as corresponding with material used in clothing sold by him to Daniel, and also

Influenza Helps To Swell Death Rate in Atlanta

No Cause for Alarm at Outbreak, However, Says Dr. Kennedy.

The annual outbreak of influenza was largely responsible for increasing deaths in Atlanta from 65 for the week ending December 23 to 82 for the week ending December 30 and will probably be responsible for an increase to nearly 100 for the present week, it was admitted by Dr. J. P. Kennedy, city health officer, Friday.

"There is no cause for alarm at this outbreak," Dr. Kennedy asserted. "But it should be a warning for people to take the best possible care of themselves and to risk no lowering of vitality by careless exposure or intemperance of any kind."

Reports to the state department of health from all sections of Georgia show little change in the influenza outbreak which began several weeks ago. The proportion of deaths is not alarming, it was stated.

Dr. Kennedy said that there is no reason to consider closing theaters, schools, churches and other places where crowds congregate. "Experience has shown that nothing whatever is to be gained by closing these places," he asserted. "It has been tried during the present outbreak in several small towns without effect and it did no good in Atlanta and even in army camps in previous outbreaks."

Influenza outbreaks have occurred annually since 1918. Dr. Kennedy said, and Atlanta passed through its most vicious epidemic in 1920 when in one week the death rate was increased from the normal of about 65 to a high record of 156. Increase in population since 1920, Dr. Kennedy said, will make the anticipated death list of 100 this week of less significance than the cold figures would indicate.

From 10 to 15 Atlanta people die every week of pneumonia and influenza, while last week they were responsible, according to physicians' diagnoses, for 24 deaths. Thirty or more will be attributable to influenza and its complications this week, according to Dr. Kennedy.

People suffering with tuberculosis, Bright's disease, chronic heart trouble and other organic ailments which have the effect of weakening the system and lowering resistance against disease should be especially wary of poorly ventilated rooms, of sudden changes in temperature or of prolonged exposure, Dr. Kennedy advised.

It is also advisable for all people who catch severe colds and register a few degrees of fever to go to bed and get over it without exposing themselves to worse infection or infecting others.

Chief May Decline.
Several members of the committee expressed belief that Chief Beavers would accept this proposition. When questioned, however, Chief Beavers declined to discuss it, stating that he was not concerned with anything other than the performance of his duties.

"The committee has not suggested anything of such nature to me," declared the chief, "and I am not concerned with anything other than the administration of my duties in keeping the affairs of the police department moving onward."

Mayor Sims refused to comment on matters pertaining to the police "shake-up," stating that he would not assume to dictate to the committee. He declared his utmost confidence in the ability of the committee to cope with the problem, adding that he was certain it would do its best in checking certain laxness in the police department.

Meet at Police Station.
That all official meetings of the new police committee, which supercedes the old board of police commissioners, are to be held in the assembly room at police headquarters on Decatur street instead of the committee rooms of council in the city hall, was the announcement Friday.

MOTHER AND SONS SENTENCED TO TEN YEARS FOR KILLING

Confess to Slaying of Father in Order to Save Mother's Life From Drunken Attack.

CONFESSION CREATES SENSATION IN COURT

Is Second Trial of Trio in Baxley for Death in February, 1921, of Lee O'Berry.

Baxley, Ga., January 5.—(Special.) After admitting the slaying of Lee O'Berry at their farm in February, 1920, Mrs. E. Ivira O'Berry, his wife, and William and Annley O'Berry, his two sons, were sentenced this afternoon to ten years' imprisonment by Judge Douglas E. Custer, of Bainbridge, presiding for Judge J. P. Highsmith, of the Appling superior court.

The two boys will serve their sentences on the county chain gang, while the mother probably will be sent to the state farm at Milledgeville.

The verdict of the jury was voluntary manslaughter.

Judge Highsmith was disqualified because of his close connection with the Baxley banking cases, scheduled for trial at the present recess term of the superior court.

Confessions by the three defendants, who were on trial for the second time, came entirely unexpected and created a sensation in the crowded courtroom Friday morning. They had stoutly maintained their innocence and appealed a previous conviction to the supreme court.

Admission that William O'Berry fired the fatal shot in a quarrel with his father was first made by Mrs. O'Berry, and was followed by a repetition of her story by her two sons. O'Berry was killed to save the life of his wife, according to William O'Berry.

Maintained Innocence.
The woman and her sons had been tried, convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment. At the first trial they stoutly maintained their innocence and following the conviction sought another and filed an appeal with the supreme court. The case was pending in the higher court when Mrs. O'Berry decided to relate the story of the slaying.

Each defendant claimed the husband was killed as he attacked Mrs. O'Berry in a drunken rage. The state had presented a strong chain of incriminating evidence against them before they took the stand.

Mrs. O'Berry is 33 years of age and is very feeble. She collapsed after addressing the jury.

The story of William O'Berry to the jury, tallying in every detail with that of his mother and brother, was as follows:

"My father was all right when he was sober, and was good to us; but when he got drunk he was very cruel to his wife and children. On Monday before the killing, and Tuesday, the day of the killing, my father was drunk. I was plowing in the field when my father began to cook whisky.

Former Atlanta Man, 61, Elopes With Girl of 17

Philip Brady, Married Man, Held Under Mann Act. Family Doubts Charge.

Los Angeles, Calif., January 5.—(Special.)—Mary Happ, 17-year-old girl, was not murdered in Buffalo on October 17, but instead eloped with Philip Brady, 61 years of age, Los Angeles real estate man and former widely-known resident of Atlanta, where his father was prominently connected with a live stock firm years ago, according to police of this city.

Local authorities declare that in bringing to light the elopement of the Happ girl and Brady, who is three times her age, they have solved a mystery that has baffled police of two cities in different parts of the continent since the mysterious disappearance of the Happ girl from her Buffalo home, and the search that ensued in view of the fear of the girl's people that she may have met with foul play.

According to the police, the first light shed upon the mystery came with her arrest and that of her companion, Brady, whom officers assert has a wife and daughter, is accused of violation of the Mann act, abduction and contributing to the delinquency of a minor. He and Miss Happ have been living as man and wife in apartments in several parts of the city.

At Brady's luxuriously furnished home, 1426 West Twenty-seventh street, his father, Captain T. B. Brady, his wife, Mrs. Pauline Brady, and their daughter, Florence, were astonished to hear of the arrest.

They had presumed Brady to be in the east in connection with business affairs upon which he left the city last July.

Captain Brady, a confederate veteran, formerly of Atlanta, declared he had no intimation of the matter as disclosed by the police. "Sincerely there is some terrible error, it is unthinkable," he said, "that Henry could wrong a young girl; until I see him I cannot believe that he is guilty." Never before has there been a whisper against his good name.

The family had received letters from Brady until recently, and were not prepared for the revelation of last night.

Brady had been regarded as a devoted husband and father. "Perhaps the police are wrong," said the aged father after the full flood of realization had swept over him. "There must be some hideous mistake. I know my boy, and he is too much the gentleman to allow himself to be in such an entanglement. I shall stand by him, his wife and daughter also will be loyal."

Philip H. Brady, it was learned Friday, is the son of Captain T. B. Brady, widely-known confederate veteran, who was a member of the old Miller-Brady Stock Yard company, dissolved in 1895. In 1903 the Bradys moved to Los Angeles.

COUNTY OFFICIALS GIVEN HIGHER PAY

All Departmental Heads Re-Elected by Commissioners—Bureau of Information Is Created.

Re-election of all department heads, with substantial advances in salaries for a number of them and creation of a bureau of information for the courthouse occurred Friday afternoon at an executive session of the board of county commissioners.

Colonel Albert Howell, Sr., well-known Atlantian, who has served as assistant superintendent of the Fulton county public works for 18 years, will be placed in charge of the new information bureau, which will be opened in the lobby of the courthouse for the convenience of persons desiring information as to the various county offices.

The largest salary increase was received by A. A. Clarke, superintendent of public works. His present salary of $250 was increased to $325 a month. In addition to his position as superintendent of public works he was given the title of warden. C. P. Collier, warden, was given a new created place of assistant superintendent of public works and deputy warden. His salary of $225 a month was raised to $250.

George Mathieson, chief of the county police; C. M. Holland, purchasing agent; G. E. Settle, head of the industrial farm for whites, and W. G. Patrick, head of the industrial farm for negroes, were re-elected.

GEORGIA SOLONS WORK FOR LARGER POSTOFFICE HERE

See Encouragement in Recent Request From Mellon for Bigger Federal Building Facilities.

MAJOR SITUATIONS
GET FIRST CALL

Further Investigation to Be Made Into Needs of This City and Several Others on List.

Constitution Bureau, Raleigh, N.C., January 5.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—Although the inadequacy of present building facilities in Atlanta for activities of the federal government has been officially recognized, it is believed here today that no appropriation for relief in the Georgia city will be forthcoming until the major recommendations, embodying a list of 140 cities, made to congress are provided for.

The recommendations for improvement in postoffice and federal buildings, designating certain cities over the country, were submitted to congress in a joint communication from the postmaster general and the secretary of the treasury.

Atlanta Included.
Atlanta was included as one of the places in need of additional facilities, but further investigation was said to be necessary to determine the method of relief to be suggested.

Senator William J. Harris has already introduced a bill in the senate providing for the erection of a federal building at Atlanta, to be used as a postoffice and for other governmental offices. Congressman William D. Upshaw is co-operating in the matter. The aggregate cost of the site and building would not exceed $3,000,000 under the terms of the Harris bill.

Senator Harris requested the supervising architect of the treasury department, in charge of all federal buildings, to make an investigation several months ago and in response to that request the treasury department estimated $2,500,000 was needed to erect an eight-story building in addition to the present quarters in Atlanta. The department estimated that the necessary real estate would cost between $225,000 and $300,000 and in the Harris bill one half million dollars was added to cover the approximate cost of the land.

Savannah on List.
Many other Georgia cities are seeking relief by the construction of federal buildings of additional quarters. Savannah is the only other Georgia city included in the letter to congress.

It is believed that some action may be secured in the cases set forth by the secretary of the treasury and postmaster general during the present session of congress, but it is not thought that no other cities will be included in the consideration until the major situations are relieved.

ELEVEN ARE HURT WHEN EXPLOSION WRECKS BUILDING

Breckenridge, Texas, January 5.—Eleven men were injured, three believed fatally, in an explosion at the plant of the Central Gasoline Production company, ten miles northeast of here, this afternoon. The blast resulted when a pipe carrying 3,000,000 cubic feet of gas became disconnected, the gas igniting and demolishing a building 40x120 feet in dimensions. The roof was blown 100 feet in the air.

Sixteen Indicted Alleged Violations Of Anti-Trust Laws

Cleveland, January 5.—Sixteen members of the wage committees of the National Association of Window Glass Manufacturers and National Association of Window Workers were indicted by a federal grand jury here today on charges of having violated the Sherman anti-trust laws.

John M. Steller, president of the local association of glass workers, was named in one indictment.

EXPECT CRISSINGER TO SUCCEED HARDING

Pressure Is Brought to Bear to Get Southerner Named as Member of Reserve Body.

Constitution Bureau, Raleigh, N.C., January 5.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—Following the announcement yesterday that Governor W. P. G. Harding, of the federal reserve board, has eliminated himself as a candidate for reappointment to the post, President Harding is expected to send to the senate within a few days the nomination of D. R. Crissinger, of Marion, Ohio, present controller of the currency, as his successor.

The decision to appoint Comptroller Crissinger as head of the board was made known today through highly reliable sources, and is confirmed by The Washington Post, semi-official organ of the administration, which is carrying a copyrighted statement to that effect. Announcement of the appointment, it is said, will be deferred until the president has made up his mind as to the second vacancy on the federal reserve board, it being the plan of the chief executive to send both to the senate at the same time.

Governor Harding's decision to withdraw as a candidate to succeed himself was voluntary, it was asserted. Since his recent return from Cuba, where he went on a special governmental mission at the invitation of President Harding, the federal reserve board head has received several flattering offers from private banking institutions, and it was due to these that he decided to eliminate himself from further consideration for the office, it was stated. Although Governor Harding is said to have announced to Secretary Mellon, of the treasury department, immediately after his return from the foreign mission his intention to withdraw

BURSUM WILL QUIT PENSION BILL FIGHT

Author of Measure Vetoed by Harding to Content Himself With "Exploring" President's Action.

Washington, January 5.—Plans for an attempt in the senate to pass the Bursum pension bill over President Harding's veto were said today to have been abandoned.

Senator Bursum, republican, New Mexico, author of the bill would have raised pensions of civil and Mexican war veterans from $50 to $72 a month and those of their widows from $30 to $50 said he did not now expect to make a motion to override the veto but probably would content himself with a speech next week deploring the president's action. He plans to reintroduce the bill after revision to meet some of the president's objections to increased pensions for widows who had been married for only a short time to veterans.

Poincare and Allies Have Abandoned the Idea of Hasty Entrance into the Ruhr Valley.

PREMIERS WEIGH
HUGHES' PROPOSAL

Many Hope Independent Action by France in Reparations Drive Can Be Averted.

ADMIT INABILITY TO PAY.

Berlin, January 5.—(By the Associated Press.)—The German government today admitted its inability to meet the payment of 500,000,000 gold marks which is due January 15, in accordance with the London reparations schedule, as it naturally assumed that the whole question of reparations would be subjected to overhauling after the German payment of treasury bonds to Belgium.

The government apparently is awaiting some sort of communication from the reparations commission and in all probability will counter an ultimatum from France by making reference to the treaty proviso which prescribes that the reparations demands must be authorized and supported unanimously by the commission. It is pointed out in some quarters, however, that M. Poincare has a loophole which entitles him to proceed independently, or with the consent of Italy and Belgium in event of a German default as cited in connection with the timber and coal deliveries.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Paris, January 5.—France and her remaining allies, Italy and Belgium, have abandoned any idea of a hasty entrance into the Ruhr region of Germany, and tonight have settled back carefully to plan their coercive action against Germany.

There seemed little likelihood after today's conferences between M. Poincare, the French premier; the Marquis Della Torretta, the Italian delegate, and M. Theunis and M. Jaspar, of Belgium, that any civil or military movements into Westphalia would not be undertaken until after January 15.

Germany on that date, it is taken for granted, will default on the 500,000,000 gold marks due under the old schedule of payments suspended during 1922.

American suggestions, it is felt here, would have ample time to be presented to M. Poincare before he finally gives marching orders to engineers and customs officers and their military escort, whether the latter is to be merely a guard or an army.

Inspire Hope.
Washington dispatches inspire hope that President Harding may offer some plan which would forestall independent action by France. It was learned authoritatively today, however, that American officials in Europe see no chance for any American move in the premises being successful at this time short of a promise to cancel debts and arrange a loan, and have so informed the Washington government. Since cancellation and a loan seem out of the question, it apparently is the belief of the Americans that it would be futile merely to offer advice.

The opinion apparently prevails here that the Washington government has been counseled to remain quiet until the French go into the Ruhr and have an opportunity to test the value of whatever plan they finally evolve. If the French plan proves a failure, as American observers think it will, it is pointed out that then would be the opportune moment to suggest to France that all the allies, with the United States, might usefully get together and reconsider the whole question.

Purpose Unknown. Exactly what France purposes to do has not been finally determined. Premier Poincaré's intention to seize German government property in the Ruhr included, when it was first proposed, heavy military support; but the French plan offered at the premier's conference partook somewhat of fiscal supervision. This latter plan, however, was a compromise offered by Great Britain and France no longer is bound by it.

M. Poincaré's "unimpaired disagreement" with Bonar Law, however, and knowledge that the United States may yet intervene, will, it is believed, make M. Poincaré tend toward progressive action, beginning with limited action and increasing its scope if the Germans are not impressed and as the efficiency of the movement is demonstrated. This also would make it easy for Great Britain and the United States to prepare for some substituted plan before the French movement was fully developed.

Line Up With France. Italy and Belgium lined up with France in opposing the British proposal; but how far Italy will go toward supporting a French plan seems to some a matter of doubt, although it has been said that the Italian premier, Signor Mussolini, might send a small Italian detachment into Germany as proof of his co-operation. Marquis Della Torretta, who represented Italy at the premier's conference, left tonight for Rome to confer with Mussolini.

M. Poincaré's ideas will be put before his cabinet tomorrow. There undoubtedly is a plan which is ready for action; but the finishing touches are needed in view of the situation, for this is France's first day of what the newspapers call "freedom" from the necessity of getting Great Britain's consent and there is a new sense of responsibility and its accompanying need for caution.

General Weyand right hand man to Marshal Foch, was called back to Paris from Lausanne tonight, although military plans long ago were worked out for any possible movements in the Ruhr. French headquarters at Mayence, as usual in all political crises has prepared for quick action as a matter of routine.

Premier Poincaré's determination to proceed under the Versailles treaty is causing him to seek from the reparations commission, authority that will give France the legal right to compel Germany to pay. This policy, initiated when the reparations commission declared Germany in voluntary default on wood deliveries, is expected to be strengthened tomorrow by similar action on the part of the commission in registering a default on coal deliveries.

M. Poincaré is understood to feel that these two declarations by the commission will give him the desired legal authority to move against Germany; but it is likely that he will await a decision of the commission refusing the moratorium Germany requested sometime ago. Having waited for such measures there could be but a few days' delay until the payment of 500,000,000 gold marks by Germany falls due January 15. It is thought, therefore, that M. Poincaré will delay action until this expected culminating default.

WASHINGTON WAITS DEVELOPMENTS.

Washington, January 5.—The Washington government is waiting on developments in the reparations crisis. It sees no present opportunity to make American help available to Europe.

This was the substance of authoritative glimpses of the situation given today at the white house and at the state department. It was said flatly at the white house that the administration had no plan for calling an international conference. At the state department it was asserted that the American government could not properly go beyond what it has already in Secretary Hughes' suggestion that international financial leaders be asked to propose a reparations solution. That suggestion, made in Mr. Hughes' recent speech at New Haven, still is before the allied governments. It was intimated today that Washington officials were without knowledge as to whether the French authorities were inclined to take it up before resorting to the drastic measures of the French reparations plan in which the council of premiers split yesterday in Paris.

With action thus halted so far as administration officials are concerned, senate consideration of the crisis also came to a temporary stop today. The resolution offered by Senator Robinson, democrat, Arkansas, to authorize official American representation on the reparations commission was before the foreign relations committee, but action was deferred until Chairman Lodge could confer with Secretary Hughes and obtain official word as to the desires of the administration on the proposal.

He is expected to see the secretary tomorrow and report back to his committee.

Comment Withheld. Direct comment on the Robinson proposal is withheld. At the white house, however, the significant statement was made that the question of representation on the reparations commission had ceased to be of pressing importance, in view of developments in Paris. It was indicated that the view taken by administration officials is that the rupture at Paris has dislocated the whole relation of the commission to the problem as that relationship was planned in the treaty of Versailles. Presumably, that will be the view expressed to Senator Lodge by Secretary Hughes. It is a curious side light on the American angle on the reparations crisis that President Harding and his cabinet did not take the subject up today. That fact is interpreted as clearly outlining the waiting attitude in which the Washington government finds itself, with all initiative for new efforts at a settlement resting in the hands of European statesmen.

It was explained officially at the state department that there is no basis on which Washington can read a formal proposal of any character to the allies at this juncture. The problem is theirs, deeply as it may affect American interests, present or future. Control of the situation is in their hands and the United States cannot properly and with any hope of accomplishing good, do more than it has done in making a suggestion as to ways and means by which it believes the European governments can find a way to agreement and also to American economic aid in world re-education.

Weights Subject. It is clear that Secretary Hughes made his suggestions and also selected the time for his utterance after most careful weighing of the possible effect of what he would say. It was desired to avoid any possible impression of the nature of the conversation that America was seeking to force its views on the allies. It also was Mr. Hughes' purpose to emphasize the wholly friendly object of his hint, particularly to France, for there is a lack of understanding in Washington of the peculiar difficulties of French statesmen or of the trend of French public opinion.

It would be going much too far to say that President Harding and his advisers are without hope that a way out of the tangle will be disclosed before drastic action is taken by the French; yet there appears to be no definite grounds for their hopes so far as was learned today.

Ambassador Jusserand was among

Secretary Hughes' callers today. Presumably, he went to the state department under instructions cabled by Premier Poincaré to amplify the statement that he had already made of France's reason for rejecting the German proposal for a one-generation "ease pact" among the powers directly interested in the Rhine problem. There was no word either from the embassy, or from the department, however, as to the nature and purpose of the visit.

"Words I have said to the secretary are his property to do with as he will," was all Ambassador Jusserand would say afterward.

Mr. Hughes, however, declined to make any statement.

Before the ambassador called, Mr. Hughes had spent considerable time in conference with Ambassador Harvey. As had been the case with every previous meeting, however, no statement of the nature of the conversation was obtainable from any authorized source.

Four Are Wounded In Pitched Battle With Bank Robbers

Sioux City, Iowa, January 5.—A bandit and three officers were wounded in a fight between bank robbers and officers at Maurice, Ia., near Sioux City, early this morning. The bandits, who raided the Sioux County bank, failed to get any loot. The police surprised them while at work and opened fire, a running battle following. The bandits escaped.

INVESTIGATE STORY OF BURIED JEWELS

Grave of Sailor, Said to Contain Russian Crown Jewels, Has Not Been Disturbed.

New York, January 5.—Government officials today frankly admitted they were investigating reports that Russian crown jewels to the value of $4,000,000 had been smuggled into this country in the coffin of an American sailor and buried in the national cemetery in Brooklyn.

While no armed guard was stationed at the grave, Mr. Buschman let it be known that he had a shotgun handy and that he was keeping a sharp watch.

Meanwhile the grave of Seaman James Jones, who died on the steam transport Editha at Gibraltar in August, 1920, on the way to the United States from Vladivostok and into whose coffin the jewels were reported to have been slipped, remained undisturbed.

Superintendent Buschman, of the cemetery, confirmed the fact that Jones was buried in the cemetery. Mr. Buschman, however, declined to point out Jones' grave among the 5,000 under his supervision.

While no armed guard was stationed at the grave, Mr. Buschman let it be known that he had a shotgun handy and that he was keeping a sharp watch.

SURGEON DENIES LENIN IS CRITICALLY ILL.

Berlin, January 5.—Professor Klemperer, the famous surgeon, has issued a denial that he has been called to Moscow to treat Nikolai Lenin, Russian dictator, who, reports state, has just suffered the third stroke of paralysis. Friends of the physician declare he saw Lenin several times some months ago on the occasion of his second stroke.

The Russian embassy here denies that Lenin is ill.

$175,000 TO BE SPENT
ON PRESIDENT'S YACHT

Washington, January 5.—Alterations costing upward of $175,000 are to be made on the Mayflower, the presidential yacht. She will be converted into an oil burner, larger living accommodations will be provided, a new weather deck will be laid, and there will be numerous minor alterations to increase the comfort of the ship. The Mayflower will leave here for Norfolk navy yard Sunday. Work will be rushed so that the presidential yacht will be ready for a cruise to Alaska should President Harding be free to make his long-deferred trip there next summer. An additional officer's stateroom will be provided for the crew. Installation of oil burners will cost about $118,000 and other changes will cost upward of $50,000.

Dr. J. Duncan Spaeth, professor of English at Princeton university, believes that persons who wish to become proficient in business English should make a study of Latin.

Imagination Is Stronger Than Will, Declares Coue

ARTICLE 2.
BY EMILE COUE.
(Copyright, 1923, United States, Great Britain, Canada and South America by North American Newspaper Alliance and New York World (Press Publishing Company). All rights reserved. Unlicensed reproduction in full or in part expressly prohibited.)

Before beginning to explain the practical application of auto-suggestion and the extremely simple method by which it is possible for everyone to gain complete mastery over his physical organism, I must speak of the all-important role of the imagination.

Contrary to the generally accepted theory the will is not the invincible force it is claimed to be; in fact, whenever imagination and will come into conflict it is always imagination that triumphs. Try to do something while you are repeating: "I cannot do it"—and you will see this truth confirmed. The mere idea of inability to accomplish a thing paralyzes the will power.

Self-mastery is attained when the imagination has been directed and trained to conform with our desires—for although, in one sense, the imagination is contained in the subconscious, yet it dominates the latter, and therefore, if we know how to guide it, our subconscious self will take charge of our material being and do its work just as we wish it to be done; or in other words exactly in conformity with our conscious suggestions.

I cannot too strongly insist that, in the practice of auto-suggestion the exercise of will must be strictly avoided, except in the initial phase of directing or guiding the imagination toward the desired lines. This is absolutely the only manifestation of will necessary, or even desirable. Any other voluntary effort is positively harmful in connection with auto-suggestion, and will almost certainly have a contrary effect to the one desired.

Analyze the so-called strong-willed characters of history: Napoleon, Caesar, etc. You will find that they were all men of big imagination. Certain ideas were implanted in their minds, and their tenacious suggestions impelled them to action.

This, however, is a digression. What I want to drive home for the moment is the law of what my friend Charles Baudouin calls "converted effort." Suppose a man suffering from insomnia decides to try the effect of auto-suggestion. Unless previously warned, he will repeat to himself phrases like this: I want to sleep; I will sleep; I am going to sleep. And all the time he will be making desperate efforts to coax sleep. That is fatal.

What is fatal is the very fact of exerting effort has converted the latter into a force acting in a sense contrary to the original suggestion, with the result that the poor man tosses and turns in his bed in sleepless wretchedness.

Let the imagination do its work alone, unhindered. Be quite passive. Through mysterious, still unexplained, possesses our subconscious self accomplishes its marvelous things. Think of the very commonest movements of the human body and ask yourselves how they are operated. What has set in motion the complicated mechanism when you stretch your arm to reach a glass on a table or when you take a cigarette from your case? No one knows. But if we cannot explain the phenomenon we do know that, in actual fact, it is an order resulting from a mere suggestion which is transmitted through the nervous system, and translated into action at a speed infinitely greater than that of lightning.

Examples Given

Thousands of examples of the power of imagination may be found in every day life. There is the one given by Pascal, and so often cited, but which I cannot help repeating here, because it is such a perfect illustration. No one would have the slightest difficulty in walking along a foot-wide plank placed on the ground. But put the same plank across a street at the height of one of your American skyscrapers. Blondel himself would not have dared trust himself on it. Anyone who did would assuredly fall to death. No clearer proof of the power of an idea could be desired. There is, however, another striking example in the immensity with which sleepwalkers perform the most perilous feats, such as wandering about on a roof, hugging the extreme edge of it, to the terror of their friends, who may happen to perceive them. If awakened suddenly a sleepwalker in such a position would inevitably fall.

Here is another. Dr. Binard in his book "De la Philosophie et de la Longevite" relates that in the middle of a large dinner party the cook rushed in to announce that she had made a mistake and mixed arsenic with the food instead of some other ingredient! Several persons were immediately seized with pains and sickness, which only ceased when the cook came back to say that it was a false alarm; there had been no such dreadful error!

I have said enough to prove the irresistible influence of the idea or imagination over the physical organism. It determines pain, movement, emotions, sensations. Its effect is both moral and physical. We may logically conclude, therefore, that human ailments, which are nothing but disturbance of the natural equilibrium of all the elements of our being, can be cured by the right kind of idea or suggestion.

To begin with, there is in every disease, of no matter what nature, a moral factor which no doctor can afford to ignore. Some medical authorities in France estimate this moral factor as representing from 40 to 50 per cent of the chances of recovery. A patient who says to himself "I am getting better" actually increases his vital forces and hastens his recovery. By gently putting our imagination on the right track we are sure to aid nature, who manifests herself through the medium of our subconscious self. The instinct of self-preservation is but a manifestation of nature. At the first sound of alarm she heeds to the rescue. A cut finger or other wound is followed by a rush of red globules to the injured part. That wonderful subconscious self of ours does it. For it knows and commands every movement of our being, every contraction of our heart, the minutest vibration of every cell in our organism. "I am getting better" is a suggestion which we are so apt to misuse by allowing bad, disturbing or discouraging thoughts to interfere with its action. Instead of allowing it to function smoothly and harmoniously.

Limitations Not Known

Miracles are attributed to the fakirs of India. Legend or fact, I know not, but it is certainly true that they do some most wonderful things simply because they are taught from their infancy to know and make use of the limitless unseen and yet unexplained forces of nature—which can be awakened by thought.

I am often asked: What are the limitations of auto-suggestion? I reply: I really do not know. The cures I have seen and experienced are so amazing, so incredible, that I decline theoretically to place any limit at all, although, of course, I must insist on nothing but the practice of rational auto-suggestion which is obviously outside the domain of material possibilities. For instance it would be absurd to ask for the growth of a new arm or a new leg, despite the fact that the lobster seems to know how to grow a new claw when it is necessary.

There are persons who, by long practice and concentration, have acquired an amazing power over their bodily functions. Cases are known to the medical faculty of Paris of men able to increase at will the speed of their heart-beats from 90 to 120, or diminish it to such a degree that the heart seems to stop still.

In another article I shall talk of the diseases actually cured by auto-suggestion, and in general of its sphere of curative possibilities. Let it be thoroughly realized that thought, or suggestion, is able to mould the human body as a sculptor chisels his clay. Thought is an act; it is more than a belief. As Dr. Carot who said "the wounds of victorious soldiers heal more rapidly than those of the vanquished?" I can declare without hesitation that whatever the illness the practice of rational auto-suggestion will always effect an appreciable improvement in the patient's condition, even if the disease itself be materially incurable.

(The next article by Professor Coue will appear Monday.)

BOMB IS THROWN INTO RAILROAD SHOPS AT MOBILE

Mobile, Ala., January 5.—A bomb was thrown into the shop yards of the Gulf, Mobile and Northern Railroad company here tonight. No damage was done to property, only a large hole being made in the ground. Three men in an unlighted automobile were seen to drive near the yards and throw an object over the fence. The shock of the explosion was felt for several blocks and heard for several miles. The police are investigating.

PLANE TAKES FALL OF 10,000 FEET; AVIATOR LIVES

Salt Lake City, Utah, January 5. Twice within the past month Henry G. Boonstra, of Lafayette, Ind., an aerial mail pilot, has flirted with death and each time he has emerged the victor.

Yesterday while flying to Salt Lake City from Rock Springs, Wyo., with a cargo of mail, he fell 10,000 feet, suffering only minor injuries, and three weeks ago, his plane wrecked near Coalville, Utah, he wandered around in a driving blizzard for 36 hours before finding shelter.

To earn money with which to complete her studies, Miss Margaret Nettleton, a junior in the Kansas State Agricultural college, spent her vacation working as assistant county engineer.

LEADERS CAUTIOUS ON DEBT PROBLEM

Solons Await Discussions With British Delegation Before Committing Themselves on Question.

BY CLAYTON WHITEHILL.

Washington, January 5.—The American debt funding commission may now meet the British mission somewhat easier in mind, because the several members have received considerable inside information from Ambassador George Harvey.

Throughout Friday Senator Smoot and Representative Burton were in conference with Harvey and Secretaries Hughes and Mellon, relative to the allied debt situation as it affects the British. Although Chancellor of the Exchequer Stanley Baldwin and Governor Montague Collett Norman, of the Bank of England, conferred informally with President Harding at the white house late Friday, and later called on Secretary Mellon, the actual discussions will probably not begin before next Monday.

Meantime leaders in both houses of congress are conducting themselves with extreme caution on the debt funding problem, pending the outcome of the discussions with the British.

Reed Proposes Plan.

The only out-spoken member so far is Senator Reed, democrat, of Missouri, who has just proposed that Great Britain and France trade their island possessions in the West Indies in payment of their debts to the United States. Reed's proposal is, of course, radically different from anything submitted to date, and his democratic colleagues, as well as the republican senators, are reserving comment for the present.

Elsewhere the democrats are reluctant regarding Senator Smoot's plan of extending the time limit of payment from 25 to 45 years and for reducing the rate of interest from 4 1/2 per cent to some lower figure. Senator Carter Glass, wartime secretary of the treasury, under whose administration the debt was contracted and who is credited with having devised a debt funding scheme with the British—which scheme was discarded with the retirement of Earl Grey—believes nothing can be gained at present by senatorial discussion of the problem.

Would Not Interfere.

In the house, where any modification of the debt funding law would have to be considered, republican sentiment, as reflected by Representative Nicholas Longworth, inclines toward leaving well enough alone. He does not anticipate the introduction of any debt funding legislation in this congress unless an emergency arises, which he does not contemplate. Accordingly he is not in a general way, and regards the present time limit and interest as satisfactory.

Representative Garrett, Tennessee, democratic floor leader, pointed out that when the debt funding act was under discussion the democrats felt that a commission was unnecessary, and that the secretaries of state and the treasury had ample authority to deal with the debts themselves. Although the situation has been changed by the present law, Garrett believes "these debts are going to be a source of irritation for many years to come."

Former Episcopal Bishop Will Wed Oregon Heiress

New York, January 5.—The Rev. Dr. Robert Lewis Padlock, formerly Protestant Episcopal bishop of the missionary district of eastern Oregon, and Miss Helen Aiken, heiress to a half of a $2,500,000 estate, are to be married in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine next Tuesday. He is 33 years old and she is 45.

He resigned as bishop last September on the ground of poor health, although his friends reported that hostility on the part of some clergymen was the underlying reason. He was a picturesque figure, traveling in khaki with blankets on his back, to sparsely settled regions.

Before going to Oregon Dr. Padlock attracted attention here as a vice crusader on the East Side.

Miss Aiken's father, who died in 1919, was head of a drygoods firm.

NEW MINE CONFERENCE IN SIGHT, IS REPORT

Operators and Workers Expected to Meet at New York, January 17.

Chicago, January 5.—Return to the old central competitive field as a basis for fixing wage scales in certain coal fields seemed a certainty here today with the adjournment of the joint conference of 15 districts and the understanding among operators and miners that a call would be issued for a conference to be held in New York January 17 to 22.

The call for the New York meeting is expected to be issued by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers of America, and signed by Phil H. Penna, president of the Indiana Operators' association and chairman of the conference just ended, but acting in this instance only as an individual.

The joint conference adjourned sine die today without reaching any agreement upon which to base wage scale agreements, ends a series of meetings and conferences which began in Cleveland last October. The conference embracing 15 districts was too large, some said, to handle the many divergent opinions among operators was blamed by many to be the cause of failure.

The new call is understood by operators to include the old central competitive field of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Western Pennsylvania with a few adjacent states. Operators of the old four state group appeared to be the only ones working harmoniously during the recent conference.

Lewis Blames Operators. Lewis directly blamed the inability of operators to decide upon some plan for failure of the conference, but expressed the belief that "in the near future it may be possible to give promise of concrete accomplishment."

In a telegram dispatched to John Hays Hammond, chairman of President Harding's fact-finding commission immediately after adjournment of the joint conference, operators declared they had made earnest efforts to reach an agreement but the comprehensiveness of a nationwide conference had made this impossible.

"The operators' proposal to the conference was the only one upon which agreement could be reached among themselves," the telegram stated, referring to the district settlement plan offered yesterday. "We further believe that a practical and practicable solution of our difficulties. We regret that the miners could not agree with us on this proposal. No other solution could come from this conference."

The likelihood of a strike April 1 when present agreements expire, is but slightly increased by the failure of this conference, according to the beliefs expressed by operators and miners, almost all of them placing confidence in the meeting to be called.

PLANS FOR FLOATING SCHOOL ARE OUTLINED

The Candler floating school, to begin operations next fall, will be a junior college, having a two-year high school course and a two-year college course, the civilian club was told Friday by Major E. T. Winston, vice president and general manager of the enterprise, and Dr. Zebulon Judd, who will be head of the faculty.

Major E. T. Winston declared in a short address at the weekly luncheon of the club that the school will draw its faculty from the leading high schools and universities in America, expressing the opinion that the greatest educational institutions in the country would gladly grant their instructors leave of absence to make the trips on the school ship.

The steamship Logan is now en route from the Pacific coast to Baltimore, where it will be met by Messrs. Winston and Judd and Asa G. Candler, Jr., who is financing the project, and will be turned over to naval architects who will equip it for school purposes.

A fancy exhibition dance by Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Sparks, of Erie, Pa., former Atlantans, and a piano selection by Miss Frances Minor, completed the program. The meeting was the first to be held in order by the new president, Thomas Dunham.

Will Make Attempt To Curtail Debate On Shipping Bill

Washington, January 5.—Notice was served on the senate today by Senator Jones, republican, Washington, in charge of the administration shipping bill, that he would endeavor tomorrow through unanimous consent agreement to curtail debate on the shipping measure.

Changes have been made that filibustering tactics were being employed to prevent the shipping measure from coming to a vote, and Senator Jones would fix a progressive limitation on debate.

HAYS ISSUES HIS "FINAL" STATEMENT IN ARBUCKLE CASE

New York, January 5.—Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., today issued what he termed his final word on the case of Roscoe C. (Fatty) Arbuckle.

Mr. Hays' statement was issued after a conference yesterday with this committee on public relations concerning the status of the comedy star, who was banned from the screen after the sensational death of Virginia Rappe, screen actress, at a drinking party in San Francisco. Mr. Hays expressed the belief that Arbuckle should have a chance to "make good" after Arbuckle had been acquitted of a charge of slaying her.

"All suggestions which have been received from all viewpoints," his "final statement" says, "and they are many and varied, will be referred to the proper parties. This is the kind of question that must be left finally to the judgment of the public on the one hand and on the other hand to those who have business associations with the individual, and the individual himself. I have removed the official situation of one man being appearing to be the judge in such matters either for one hundred and ten million people, or for a great industry and art."

PREDICT SETTLEMENT OF BRITISH DEBT SOON

Members of Commission Say Solution Will Come Within Two Weeks' Time.

New York, January 5.—Within two weeks the terms of payment of the British war debt to the United States will be settled.

This prediction was made by Stanley Baldwin, British chancellor of the exchequer, and Montague Collett Norman, member of the British debt funding commission.

President Harding's attitude toward allied debts has modified greatly within the past year, they said, and members of the American administration are likewise willing to "co-operate."

"I have been informed the president is now ready to call for a change in the conditions under which England shall pay her debt," Norman asserted. "We expect a speedy solution of the problem, and the psychological moment for such a solution has arrived."

The settlement, both Norman and Baldwin said, will be advantageous to America.

"We have no hope of canceling our debt to the United States," Baldwin stated. "England has always paid and always will."

"Adjustments of this matter will serve to stabilize trade conditions in Europe," he added. "The entire European economic situation would from such a settlement."

Norman denied having converted Harding to belief in the necessity of American participation in Europe's recovery.

"On a previous visit I talked with the president," he said. "He did hold off for a while and has now, I believe, changed his mind. I think he was just waiting. It was a question of expediency. You know there comes a time when the flower blooms. I think we are very near that moment."

Feeling sure the debt question will be settled without delay, Baldwin has booked to sail January 20 for England.

Atlanta Interests Are Not Affected By Terry Petition

Washington, January 5.—Appointment of a receiver for the Terry Shipbuilding corporation of Savannah, Ga., is sought in a petition filed today in the District of Columbia supreme court by Percy Sawyer, a New York ship broker, who declared the corporation owed him $198,000 in commissions for the sale of ships.

The steamship Logan is now en route from the Pacific coast to Baltimore, where it will be met by Messrs. Winston and Judd and Asa G. Candler, Jr., who is financing the project, and will be turned over to naval architects who will equip it for school purposes.

In his petition Sawyer declared he made a contract with the company to act as agent and broker in finding sale for the company's ships. After organizing an office force in New York at great expense, Mr. Sawyer said he sold on April 20, 1920, five tank steamers to the United States Mexican Oil corporation for $9,838,750, on which he claims a commission of two per cent which totals $197,750. He claims he has not been paid and that the assets of the corporation are being disbursed to his detriment.

DOES NOT AFFECT ATLANTA INTERESTS. The petition for receiver for the corporation does not affect the purchase, acquisition and distribution of the Georgia Wool Stock company and the American Mills company, both of Atlanta. Legal action in individual cases, consumption of the deal were finally settled Friday by attorneys for local companies in Washington, D. C.

Officials here have not decided what disposition will be made of the plant. They paid around $500,000 for it. During the height of the shipbuilding boom of war-times the plant was valued at several millions of dollars and is still in perfect condition.

UNIQUE LABOR BODY FORMED IN CHICAGO

Group Bargaining Replaces Collective on Day-Work Basis in New Organization.

Chicago, January 5.—A labor organization, said to be the first organization of its kind, has been formed by former labor union members in the locomotive shops of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis railway at Beech Grove, Ind., according to an article appearing tomorrow in The Railway Review.

Group bargaining on the basis of units of output has replaced collective bargaining on a day work basis in the new organization, known as the Associated Employees of Beech Grove, Inc. The labor corporation is incorporated under the laws of Indiana, is not for profit, and has about 1,800 members.

Instead of limiting the day's output per man, the primary idea of the new organization is to increase the daily output of individuals and thus increase their earning power. According to The Railway Review, operation of the new plan has increased shop production about 25 per cent in three months, using a smaller working force, the same equipment and the same supervisory staff, while wages of employees have been increased above the scale authorized by the railroad labor board, and production costs have been reduced.

Under the new plan, operations are carried on as far as possible under individual subcontracts, constituting a system of group bargaining, the unit of output instead of the unit of time being the basis of compensation, the unit schedules for various kinds of work being the subject of individual agreement.

The new plan was adopted after a long series of labor disputes at the shops which finally resulted in the shop work being contracted by the railroad to the Railway Service and Supply corporation. Twelve rules have been substituted for the 186 railroad labor board regulations governing work.

Bar Association Formed in Rome; Has 35 Members

Governor-Elect Clifford Walker Unanimously Elected Honorary Member.

Rome, Ga., January 5.—(Special.) Following a sumptuous repast in the dining room of the Arundel hotel last night, 35 members of the Rome bar enrolled their names as charter members of the Rome Bar association.

Officers were elected and a committee consisting of R. A. Denny, Nat Harris and Wright Williamson was appointed to draw up a constitution and rules for the organization and report to the next meeting, which occurs next Thursday evening at the same place.

G. A. H. Harris, Jr., acting as temporary chairman, called the meeting to order. L. A. Dean was elected president; G. E. Maddox, vice president, and J. Dean Owens, secretary-treasurer. After his election Mr. Maddox presided over the meeting in the absence of Mr. Dean.

Governor-elect Clifford Walker was present and was unanimously elected an honorary member of the association. Mr. Walker, in response to a call, made a few appropriate remarks, saying that he had been a visitor to Rome off and on since early youth and that the only reason he was not a resident of this city was because he could not live in two places at the same time.

He declared he had the most kindly feeling for all Rome lawyers, that he harbored no personal feeling for those who differed with him politically, but wanted all them for his friends. In behalf of lawyers in general he said that in his opinion there are fewer "suits" in that profession than in any other and that whether they should differ with him or not in the future he entertained a warm affection for every citizen of Floyd county.

Among others who delivered short speeches were Judge W. J. Nunally, Honorable John W. Bale, judge-elect of the city court, and Judge Moses Wright, of the superior court. A committee consisting of Nat Harris, G. E. Maddox, M. B. Eubanks and Harry Wright was appointed to prepare an argument before the supreme court on questions involving the constitutionality of city courts in this state.

The Red Cross, in connection with its work in aiding former service men, acquires and distributes information among the men and their families; acquaints the United States veterans' bureau with the personal equation in individual cases; prepares and furnishes comforts, recreation, and the many necessary services which the government, by its very nature, can procure only from voluntary assistance.

a small piece of cloth taken from the bodies declared to be that of Richards as corresponding with clothing he had sold to him.

Prior to the calling of the elder Daniels and McIlwain to the stand, J. C. Nettles, a fisherman, told of finding the bodies floating on the surface of the lake, and T. Semmes Walmley, assistant to the state attorney-general, and A. E. Farland, department of justice agent, had identified the clothing and trinkets as those removed from the bodies.

Mr. Walmley testified that the watch taken from the pocket of the body identified as that of Daniel indicated that it had stopped at 10 o'clock. The kidnapping occurred early in the evening, but others who were taken from their cars at the time the two men were spirited away have been quoted as saying that the masked band held them in custody several hours and still had Daniel and Richards in charge when they were released in a neighboring town.

Nettles declared he was acquainted with both men and had attended a barbecue with them at Bastrop immediately preceding their kidnapping August 24, last.

"I knew it was Daniel by his clothing," Nettles testified, "and I identified Richards by the form of his body."

Nettles also told of the finding of a back saw and a bunch of keys near the lake shore near the scene of the dynamiting.

Bodies Decapitated. The bodies, he asserted, were without head, arms or legs.

Nettles declared that from five to ten feet of the lake bank was torn away by the explosion, and asserted that when he went to a boat landing at the ferry he found that the chain with which a small boat had been moored to the bank had been sawed apart.

Captain W. W. Cooper, in command of a company of state troopers stationed at Mer Rouge, and Lieutenant R. A. Percy, of the same command, testified as to the taking of the bodies in charge by the military after their discovery was reported, and of a guard maintained over them until after an autopsy had been performed on the following day by pathologists sent from New Orleans at the direction of Governor Parker.

Captain Cooper confirmed statements made by Nettles as to the finding of the back saw and keys at the scene of the explosion.

Captain Cooper said he took charge of the bodies in carrying out confidential instructions given him by Governor Parker when he was ordered to Morehouse parish.

Lieutenant Percy's testimony related to the guarding of the bodies in the lake and after their removal until the autopsy was concluded.

Dr. O. M. Patterson, parish coroner, testified that he viewed the bodies before they were taken from the water but did not attend the inquest, which was in charge of Attorney General Coo.

What the next testimony will be was not disclosed tonight by the attorney general.

Pathologists to Testify. It is expected, however, that Dr. Charles Duvalle and Dr. John Landford, New Orleans pathologists, who performed the autopsy, would be called either tomorrow or Monday. Much interest is attached to the testimony of the two physicians because of reports that their examinations showed the bodies badly mutilated and their bones broken. Their reports have not been made public.

The arrival of two New Orleans detectives today gave rise to much speculation as to the reason for their trip to Morehouse. It was stated that they brought exhibits to be introduced during the testimony of the two physicians. One report was that they brought parts of the bodies.

The courtroom during the morning session was not more than half filled, but in the afternoon was crowded to capacity while a number, unable to find room within, milled about the corridors.

Under a court order, spectators were permitted to stand and only those who could find seats were allowed to enter. A number of women were among those who attended today's session.

ATLANTAN MENTIONED FOR PLACE ON BOARD

from the field the information was withheld.

Bitterly Opposed. Mr. Cooper's nomination will put an end to the long drawn out speculation regarding the successor of Governor Harding, whose term expired at the close of the year.

The nomination was bitterly opposed by members of the farm bloc in the senate, arising over the board's policy of deflation put into effect as an aftermath of the war. Governor Harding was endorsed by Secretary Mellon and leading banking officials of the country. In the event he had been reappointed, there was some doubt as to whether his nomination would have been confirmed.

With the elimination of Mr. Harding, who, as a resident of Alabama, was regarded as a representative of the south on the board, great pressure is being brought to bear on the president to name a southern man for the second vacancy, which was created by a recent act of congress. The act also recommended that the additional member be a "dirt farmer," and the president at the time announced his intention to nominate someone coming under that classification.

Accordingly the names of several southern men were mentioned today in connection with the post, among whom was N. A. Shaw, of Texas, who was a real "dirt farmer" and a banker, who has the support of Secretary Fall of the interior department. Martin F. Amoroso, of Atlanta, and Martin White, who has been prominent in co-operative marketing work, together with several other southern men, were being considered for the appointment, it is said.

Meyer for Comptroller. It was said in well informed circles that Eugene Meyer, Jr., managing director of the war finance corporation, who has received prominent mention for governor of the federal reserve board, would probably succeed Mr. Crissinger as comptroller of the currency. At the same time the name of Representative McFadden, chairman of the house banking and currency committee, was suggested also.

Bitter opposition to the appointment of J. R. Howard, of Iowa, president of the farm bureau federation, who was once regarded as a leading candidate, has developed among farmers because of his endorsement of the ship subsidy bill, it was learned. This opposition is said to have materially hurt Mr. Howard's chances of being named to the additional post.

The statement was made today that the board is in urgent need of a full membership. John K. Mitchell, of St. Paul, one of the experienced bankers of the board, left last night for Florida to recuperate from recent illness. Edmund Platt, vice governor, who has been acting governor, is also said to be preparing to take a trip, probably to the Bermudas, for his health.

Mr. Crissinger, said to be one of the closest friends of the president, is described as a "country" banker and lawyer, but he is said to have made an excellent record in the affairs of his present office.

utes to sweep up the broken glass or he would kill her.

"At last he reached over and grabbed a shotgun out of the rack, I grabbed the gun and took it away from him just as he leveled it at my mother. He told mother if she had anything to say to say it as he was going to kill her."

Father Had Stick. "When he got run," told my mother and my wife to clear out, and mother went out in the yard, and father followed her to the yard. He picked up a big stick and I heard my mother cry out in the dark and say, 'Oh, Lord, he is going to kill me.' I went out and shot him. I did not shoot to kill. He kept on fighting mother and he had her down, saying he was going to kill her."

"My brother, Anley, had run to help her and I was afraid to shoot straight at them for fear of killing mother, so the second shot went astray. Then I saw Anley strike father three times with something and the last time he struck father he fell off of mother onto the ground. Mother rose up and I heard her say, 'Oh, Lord, we have killed him.' I then called up my uncle over the telephone and intended to tell him all about it, but when he arrived at the house he was so mad I was afraid to tell him. Then we decided to deny it. But now I am telling you exactly how it all happened."

"When I got back from the neighbor's house where I went to use the phone mother told me father still was alive, and for me to go and get a doctor, so I went and got Dr. Martin. 'Gentlemen of the jury, my brother and I were protecting our mother from father, who was drunk, and who said several times he was going to kill the whole family. He said he was going to kill mother before midnight and he looked the strangest I had ever seen him look. I had never seen him look that way before.'"

SLAYER OF WILLIAMS INDICTED FOR MURDER

Mac Wooten Has Been Traced by Police to Chattanooga.

Mac Wooten, negro slayer of D. Hall Williams, prominent Atlanta lumber man, was indicted for murder Friday by the Fulton grand jury. The negro, an escaped convict, is still at large. His movements are said to have been traced by police to Chattanooga.

Mr. Williams was fatally wounded one week ago in his servants' quarters in the rear of his home on Fifth street. The escaped convict had forced a servant, at the point of a gun, to give him food. The lumber man was fired on when he attempted to rescue the servant.

It is said that the daughters of 500 of America's richest men have married titled foreigners, and that the aggregate dowry falls little short of three quarters of a billion dollars.

Declaring that decisions of the supreme court in similar proceedings indicate his certain victory over Major McGregor in the dispute over incumbency of the office of Georgia pension commissioner, John W. Clark, present commissioner, issued a statement Friday upon the coming quo warranto hearing which will be held in Judge Ellis' court on Monday.

Mr. Clark pointed to a decision in mandamus proceedings of Napier v. McLendon and declares there is also a parallel in the present status of the state superintendent of schools, Dr. M. M. Parks.

Mr. Clark's statement is as follows: "The attorney general has been out of the city and I have had no opportunity to confer with him yet. I am not at all disturbed by the quo warranto petition of Major McGregor, and I have no doubt that the decision of the supreme court in the mandamus proceedings of Napier v. McLendon will be upheld, as the same issue is involved."

Then, too, there is another and an exact parallel in the case of the state superintendent of schools. The incumbent, Dr. M. M. Parks, was elected at the same time the commissioner of pensions was elected, and he holds appointment as I hold, under commission in the governor until June 30, 1923. And his successor is not contesting the legality of his holding, as he knows that the term is for two years, whatever the date of beginning.

There is nothing in this quo warranto except a desire to get in."

The subpoena enumerates documents which were formerly named in similar subpoenas issued in efforts to bring the papers into court for use as evidence in an alleged violation of section 37 of the penal code, in connection with the strike.

Sibley ruled that certain of the papers named could be required as evidence by the district attorney, and that the attorney could not demand the production of the others.

MISTAKES OF THE KAISER

AN ANSWER TO THE KAISER'S MEMOIRS

HUMAN BESTIALITY SPEAKS

What, then, had happened at Berlin to cause such a change in the drama? Here is what happened; and it is an event of the utmost importance for understanding the war and as a contribution to history.

On the evening of that day—July 29th—on which Count Pourtales, at about 4 o'clock, had delivered the ultimatum to Russia, there had been a meeting of the council at Potsdam. There were present at it the crown prince, the chancellor, Herr von Jagow, Herr von Mohr, chief of the general staff, the minister of war, Admiral Tirpitz, Admiral Pohl and Muller.

The Terrible Council of War.
What was it that the said council was going to do? Of what was it going to speak? The list of those present shows what the object of debate was to be. Diplomacy, having played its part, was now to report humbly on what it had done, to the army, which was now about to act. No soldier, no sailor, would have succeeded in getting into that council—at which, in addition to the chiefs, less important collaborators were present—had its object been to discuss purely political matters. There, on that terrible evening, was war decided upon.

But suddenly, when the council had barely come to an end, Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg departs in great haste. He goes to Berlin, and in the middle of the night, summons the British ambassador (correspondence of the British government with its ambassador, No. 85). Then it is that the attempt was made to divide the forces of the entente. Before starting the war it was necessary to find out more exactly what England wished. The British government had not made a definite pronouncement; it had been unwilling to bind itself to anybody. It had rightly described the ultimatum to Serbia and called for a meeting between the four powers involved, but had remained, up to that moment, a calm looker-on. If England would only remain neutral, anything would be possible.

The talk between Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg and the ambassador began. It may be summarized as follows: Germany will make no territorial annexations at the expense of France in case of a war. But how about colonies? No assurance concerning them can be given. Any military operations that may become necessary in Belgium will not prevent restoration of Belgian integrity after victory (Blue Book, 85). In view of this, will not England remain neutral in case of conflict? This is what the British ambassador, with the consent of a high bid. But, at the same time, he said that England would preserve her liberty of action and he would not promise that his country would keep out.

Then Count Pourtales called upon M. Sazonoff, having received from his chief orders to do so. No longer is the brutal demand made upon Russia to disperse her forces while those of Austria stand arrayed against her; she is now asked upon what conditions she will suspend her preparations.

Blow Falls to Fall.
So the blow had failed—on that day, at least. But who will maintain that it was not a case of war having been decided upon? What was the use of that council hastily called together that evening, after the delivery of an insulting ultimatum, if it did not mean war? Why that supremely important conversation with the representative of England, the statement of conditions, discounting of war as a possibility, the proposed division of the spoils over the table of peace, if war had not been decided upon?

Decided upon? It was ready to be launched. In fact, the next day, July 30, a fearful proof of this was to be given to the world.

On July 30, at noon, the "Local Anzeiger," a semi-official paper, in close relations with the German government and with its columns at the letter's disposal, published the official order of the German army on the Russian frontier. This paper, more over, was not the only one to publish this piece of news, which, false on that day, had been true the day before. It certainly looked as if the paper had the news from the German government, so much so that it was possible to keep the paper from the all that afternoon, to offer it to the embassy, feed it to the entire population. Not until much later—when the harm had been done—was it suppressed by Herr von Jagow. The latter, to be sure, summoned M. Jules Cambon for the purpose of protesting to him against the publication of the news.

Let us forget nothing. The deeply impressed by the ultimatum, had telegraphed on July 29 to Emperor William: "It would be better to extract an Austrian-Serbian problem to the Hague Conference. I trust to thy wisdom and friendship." No answer was made to this telegram! Not even did it receive the honor of being included in the 1914 White Book! This supreme proposal of mediation did not become known, in fact, until the war was in progress, when it appeared in the official Russian newspaper.

France Makes Supreme Peace Effort.
In addition, two more conciliatory proposals were made at that time: that of Sir Edward Grey, backed by King George, and addressed to Emperor William, and that of M. Sazonoff, to the same individual, with the backing of the Entente. Neither was accepted. Herr von Jagow, the presumptuous spokesman for Austria, refused even to transmit these proposals. And this occurred between the 29th and 31st of July! During those dreadful hours, when the life of nations depended on minutes, Austria answered not a word. Germany was silent and refused to co-operate. The soldiers marched, war broke out. And yet it was Austrian mobilization which caused Russian mobilization? And Serbia had been invaded. Nevertheless, we allowed nothing to daunt or stop us; the efforts of Sisyphus to move his rock up the slope were not more desperate than what was now being done by human strength, strained to its utmost, in the cause of peace.

On July 30, however, there came a ray of hope. Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg, in view of the attitude of England brought to his knowledge by the German ambassador at London, and aware now that Sir Edward Grey did not wish to forfeit his freedom of action, but would, nevertheless, not remain aloof if France's duties as an ally involved her in the conflict, decided to yield in the face of this new situation and to act at last—or, at least, try to act!

So far he had spurned the clear-headed advice of the German ambassador at London, listening rather to the mediocre and selfish reports of the delegate who had been set to watching his chief there, and he had also believed the tales of Prince Henry of Prussia who prophesied English neutrality as a certainty. But now Bethmann-Hollweg, realizing at last —and too late—in what direction he was going, telegraphed to Vienna. Then he sent this second dispatch (July 30, 1914), which reached Vienna the 31st at 3 o'clock in the morning:

"If England is successful in its efforts (toward conciliation) whereas Vienna refuses, Vienna will prove absolutely that she desires war, into which we shall be dragged, while Russia will be entirely free from guilt. Thus, we find ourselves in an absolutely untenable position before our own country, and can but insist energetically upon the acceptance by Austria of the proposal of Grey, who still keeps it open in its entirety."

Why did he not speak earlier? How valuable that advice would have been had it been given on July 29! Granted, even, that it had not been given until the 28th or 29th, even after the armed intervention of Austria in Serbia, what a difference it would have made! If the occupation of Serbia by Austria seemed to Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg, on July 30, sufficient for disposing Austria toward conciliation, why were forty-eight hours lost before such advice was given to Austria?

It will be seen that—even assuming the hypothesis most favorable to Herr von Bethmann and to Germany—what we point out is of prime importance. As a matter of fact, of all a sudden, he sent also, on July 30, 1914 (German document, No. 145), a dispatch whereby he retracted the telegram which he had just sent. The man was drawing back! He was afraid of peace! So he sent that other telegram, revoking the one which had preceded it, and this, of course—having been revoked—promptly—was not delivered to the Vienna government by the German ambassador at Vienna.

That, the chancellor, on the same day, sent to the German ambassador at Vienna a conciliatory telegram and then revoked it. This vitally important telegram (No. 441) left Berlin at 9 p. m. and arrived at Vienna the 31st at 3 a. m. This was the dispatch advising negotiation. As to the second telegram (No. 450), cancelling the advice to be moderate which had just been sent, it was dispatched from Berlin on July 30 at 11:20 p. m. Thus, during that night of July 30-31, the entire burden of responsibility falls upon Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg.

ATLANTA LEADS IN RECRUITING FOR U. S. NAVY

Eighty-nine recruits for the navy were sent from the Atlanta station during the week ending Thursday, and only four days' active work were put in during the week, it was announced by Captain A. L. Haas, commanding officer. More than 200 applications for enlistment have been received since New Year, state Captain Haas.

A radio message was received at the recruiting office Friday from the secretary of the navy commending the local command for the splendid work. Atlanta leads in percentage of recruits and in point of numbers, Captain Haas stated, regardless of the fact that other stations have a much larger population from which to draw recruits.

Seventy of the 89 secured were native Georgians, and the others were from Florida.

CAPITOL NOTES

Secretary of State S. G. McElendon on Friday received a letter from the Automobile Underwriters' Detective Bureau, expressing high praise for the card index system installed in his office, whereby all licensed automobiles are listed under their motor numbers.

In their letter, the bureau stated that approximately 1,500 automobiles of an estimated value of $1,250,000 are stolen each year in Georgia.

Three bank charters were issued Friday in the office of Secretary of State S. G. McElendon. This constitutes a record for one day.

The Bank of Buford, Ga., renewed its charter.

The Bank of Elberton, Ga., renewed its charter.

The Exchange Bank of Springfield, Ga., secured an amendment to its charter.

NEGRO CHILD HURT BY HEAVY TRUCK; DRIVER ARRESTED

Mildred Moore, 10-year-old negro girl, was carried to the Grady hospital seriously injured, as the result of being struck and run over by a heavy motor truck at Houston and Piedmont avenue Friday evening.

Charlie Coffey, salesman for the Empire Sausage company, was operating the truck that injured the girl. He was brought to police station by Call Officers W. A. Goode and W. H. Dodd, and detained pending outcome of an investigation.

Coffey claims the girl stepped from behind another car directly in front of the machine he was driving.

Another accident which occurred about 11:30 o'clock Friday morning at Houston and Hill streets, resulted in two being arrested under charges of reckless driving.

J. E. Maulden, of 226 Grant street, driving one of the automobiles that figured in the accident, wrecked his car against a tree on the curbing. This was caused, he stated, by W. H. Fulton, negro, who was driving the truck immediately in front of him, turning suddenly into Hill street from Hunter.

Both machines were going west on Hunter street. Fulton being in front of Mr. Maulden. "When Fulton turned without warning into Hill street, it was a case of strike him or run upon the sidewalk," Mr. Maulden explained.

ANNUAL ATLANTA METHODS SCHOOL TO OPEN JAN. 23

The Annual School of Methods of the Atlanta division of the Georgia Sunday School association will be held this year in the Central Presbyterian church, January 23-26.

This school is for the training of Sunday school workers of all denominations, and will include all departments of the modern Sunday school work.

A number of out-of-state speakers will be on the faculty—one of these being Dr. Edward H. Bartlett, of Detroit, Mich. Dr. Bartlett is director of religious education for Detroit and is also one of the faculty of the International Training school at Lake Geneva, Wis., each summer.

The afternoon sessions of the school of methods will open at 4 p. m. and close at 5:30 p. m. The night sessions will open at 7:30 p. m. and close at 9 p. m.

Atlanta Electrical Association Elects Officers for 1923

J. E. Mellett was Friday elected to the presidency for 1923 of the Atlanta Electrical association to succeed C. L. Emerson, who was chosen chairman of the executive committee for the coming year.

Other officers elected at the meeting, which was held following the regular weekly luncheon of the body at the chamber of commerce, were A. G. Sanford, of Robert and company, vice president; R. C. Phillips, of the Russell Electric company, treasurer; W. C. Drake, of the Georgia Railway and Power company, secretary; C. D. Cahanis, of the Western Electric company, and L. E. Lewis, of the Walker Electric company, were named executive committeemen.

Mr. Mellett, who is with the J. M. Clayton company, was elected to the presidency from the vice president's post. Mr. Drake and Mr. Phillips were re-elected.

In their letter, the bureau stated that approximately 1,500 automobiles of an estimated value of $1,250,000 are stolen each year in Georgia.

Powerful Blast Stops Street Car Service in City

And Power Company Gets a Lot of Undeserved Knocks.

Snap judgments are frequently in error. It is often unkind to heap maledictions upon the head of some long-suffering servant of the public, when surface evidence indicates another failure of said public servant to render 100 per cent perfect service.

Friday afternoon, about 1:30 o'clock, thousands of curses ascended to high heaven and reverberated around the aural dome of Atlanta's skyline when the street cars suddenly stopped running. For eight long and patience wrecking minutes the wheels ceased to move and passengers either boiled with silent wrath or mumbled imprecations upon the Georgia Railway and Power company, its hirings and myrmidons, its antecedents and connections.

Company Blameless.
And all the time the company was entirely blameless in the affair!

Trains were missed, important conferences were delayed, banks closed before would-be withdrawers could present their checks, and other manifold and irritating complexities were added to the troubles of a day.

There was no thunderstorm to blame for the stoppage. No lightning played tag around the great generating stations. The reason for all the trouble lay in the firing of an unusually heavy dynamite charge by workmen engaged in digging a ditch opposite the power company's substation on Boulevard.

The blast knocked out the Tallulah power line, cut out electric lighting all over the city and stopped the street cars.

Blast Plays Havoc.
The workmen were in no way connected with the company, but their blast brought untold blame upon the company and all its people. It is presumed that rocks from the charge knocked the high tension wires together.

Electric lines have suffered on two other occasions this week from somewhat similar occurrences. The felling of a tree near the Ford motor plant on Tuesday caused an interruption in service when the tree fell across transmission lines. The consequent interruption of service is said to have stopped not only trolley and lighting service generally but also a number of operations in progress at Emory University hospital.

Street cars were stopped again Thursday when a tree was cut down on the South Decatur line and fell across the trolley wire.

L. H. GLENN APPOINTED STATE OIL INSPECTOR

J. J. Brown, commissioner of agriculture, on Friday announced the appointment of L. H. Glenn, of Rochelle, Wilcox county, to be state oil inspector, succeeding J. J. Holloway. Mr. Holloway resigned several weeks ago his resignation becoming effective January 1. Mr. Glenn was sheriff of Wilcox county for several years and is a prosperous lumberman.

ALL THE NEWS OF THE STATE OF GEORGIA

BUTTS COUNTY BONDS ARE SOLD AT PREMIUM

J. H. Hilsman & Co., of Atlanta, Buy Entire Issue of $150,000.

Jackson, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—The $150,000 worth of Butts county road and highway improvement bonds brought a premium of $10,730.75 when sold Friday, the purchaser being J. H. Hilsman and company of Atlanta.

The premium paid was $107.18. This is said to be the highest price ever paid for any bonds sold in Georgia. The successful bidder also paid accrued interest.

The road and highway bonds were voted March 28, 1922, and validated April 28.

Opponents of the issue, charging irregularities in the registration, carried the case to the court of appeals which recently decided in favor of the county.

The state and federal government will put up a like amount, it is said, making more than $300,000 available for highway improvement at Butts county. County Commissioner J. O. Gaston and all advocates of the bonds are delighted at the fine price received for the bonds.

SMALL BOYS PLAY HAVOC WITH NEW CHRISTMAS GUNS

Juliette, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—The small boy and his Christmas gun and his rifle have been making an expert shot in Forsyth since Christmas.

Several instances of persons being slightly injured have been reported and one man lost two fine jersey calves via the rifle bullet, the wounds being inflicted by young boys who were trying their aim on practically everything they saw.

The officers are trying to stop the reckless shooting.

OXFORD COMMISSION HOLDS FIRST MEETING

Oxford, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—The new commission of Oxford has held their first meeting for 1923, at which time the following officers for the year were elected:

W. R. Brannan, chairman; F. W. Strozier, chairman pro tem; W. F. Sherwood, street commissioner; R. L. Giles, light and water; Henry Stone, public buildings; H. H. Stone, ordinance; A. S. Murray, finance; H. H. Stone, cemetery; W. R. Brannan, cemetery; R. L. Giles, clerk and treasurer; F. W. Strozier, recorder, and Don Williams, marshal.

Elect School Head.

Juliette, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—Miss Kittie Taylor, of Belingbrook, has been elected principal of the Juliette high school for the spring term, which opened this week. The enrollment is larger than ever before and it is expected that a larger school will be built in the near future. Miss Opelia Smith is assistant principal.

BEAVERS TO GET FAIR TREATMENT

Councilman Fred C. Woodall, member of the committee.

The meetings of the police committee will be held twice monthly at 8 o'clock on Thursdays preceding the regular meetings of council. Mr. Woodall stated, and all matters pertaining to the interest of the department will be discussed publicly and not behind closed doors, he added.

The police committee decided Wednesday night while guests of former Commissioner Ed Laman to hold its official sessions at the police station instead of the city hall, as asserted by Mr. Woodall. "It was counted out that all records of the police department are kept at headquarters and access to them would be greatly facilitated by holding the meetings in the old commissioner's room."

No Action Decried On.

Councilman Woodall stated that the committee had not determined upon definite action relative to increasing the efficiency of the police department, according to its announced intention and that of Mayor Sims. Whether the committee would select a member of the force to succeed Chief Beavers, in the event he is removed from office, or would go outside and get a man for the place, is a question that will be thoroughly discussed at the first meeting of the committee next Thursday night, it was learned.

The names of the six members of the present police department or who were formerly connected with the force, are on the list now in the hands of the committee. Mr. Woodall stated. The relative merits of each of the six men now being considered will be discussed to determine whether any of them in the opinion of the committee measure up to the necessary requirements for chief of police. Councilman Woodall stated.

The six men in the department, or who were formerly attached, are Captain A. J. Holcomb, former chief; W. M. Mayo, night chief; J. W. P. Morris, present secretary to Chief Beavers; Sergeant Butler and Sergeant Roberts.

WORK RESUMED AFTER HOLIDAYS AT LOCUST GROVE

Locust Grove, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—Locust Grove institute resumed work after the holidays Wednesday, January 3, practically all the old students and some new ones rejoining for duty. The students, in accordance with instructions previously given them, returned on Tuesday and the first chapel exercises were held at the regular hour Wednesday morning.

The president, Dr. Claude Gray, in his address of welcome to the student body, bespoke their continued loyalty to the established ideals of the institute, especially urging upon each boy and girl the duty of co-operation in sustaining the reputation of the school for earnest, thorough work.

Each member of the faculty in a brief address recounted his or her experiences of the holidays, and expressed gladness to be again with the students. The hearty response of the students showed their intention to co-operate with the authorities of the school in order to make 1923 a successful year.

Attendance this year are a number of ministerial students and others preparing for special Christian and denominational service. Especial interest is daily given these in the Bible and denominational subjects by Rev. C. C. Heard. Among this number are six young men who, in order to pursue their studies, have together rented rooms and do their own cooking so as to remain in school and take advantage of these courses.

Locust Grove expects a good season in both basketball and baseball. The boys' and girls' quintets have won all the games played thus far this year. At an early date Coach Burton will begin to select and develop his material for a winning baseball team at the opening of the season.

LUMBER COMPANY PURCHASES LARGE TRACT OF TIMBER

Louisville, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—One of the biggest land deals which has occurred in recent years is the sale of the Belmont plantation, located about six miles west of here, which took place this week. J. J. B. Morrell, the previous owner, has sold the place to the T. B. Kelley Lumber company, of this place.

Mr. Morrell is a resident of Savannah and a big real estate owner and turpentine operator in that city. The Kelley Lumber company will cut and ship this lumber from Louisville. The tract contains more than 2,000 acres. The purchase price is said to be $200,000.

LIQUOR CAMPAIGN OPENED IN WARE COUNTY BY AGENTS

Waycross, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—A raid which opened the 1923 prohibition enforcement campaign in Ware county was conducted today by representatives of the sheriff's office and federal agents. A still, one of the largest captured in this county in some time, was raided on the Spivey plantation several miles from the city on the Iron Bridge road. Thirty gallons of liquor and two barrels of mash were confiscated by the officers.

Joe Spivey, whose plantation the still was found, and Benny Roberts are being held in the Ware county jail in default of $1,000 bonds each.

CEDARTOWN COUNCIL HOLDS FIRST MEETING

Cedartown, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—The Cedartown city council has held its first meeting of the year here, at which time all officers for the ensuing year, which is practically the same personnel as last year, were elected.

This is the second year of Mayor Homer Watkins' administration. One man, J. E. Morton, was added to the police force. The report of the auditor showed the city finances to be in good condition.

The following were elected without opposition: Mayor pro tem, C. B. Chapman; city clerk, J. C. Walker; city health officer, W. G. England; city attorney, E. S. Ault; city engineer, T. B. Monroe; chairman board of health, J. W. Good; city treasurer, J. A. Morton; chairman finance committee, A. E. Young; purchasing agent, J. H. Stewart; city recorder, P. A. Hunt; city auditor, E. L. Henderson; policemen, W. T. York, chief; K. Thomas, J. P. Watson, L. S. Tate, M. D. Russell, W. J. Isbell and J. E. Morton.

BANK OF ELLAVILLE DECLARES DIVIDEND

Ellaville, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Bank of Ellaville was held January 3. The report of the cashier showed that the bank had enjoyed a very prosperous year.

A dividend of 10 per cent was declared and a nice amount carried to the undivided profits account.

The following directors and officers were elected to serve the bank for the ensuing year: Directors, J. H. Stevens, A. C. Murray, Dr. J. R. Jordan, T. A. Collins and H. F. Dixon. The officers elected were: J. H. Stevens, president; A. C. Murray, vice president, and H. F. Dixon, cashier.

Louisville Expects Business Conditions To Improve in 1923

Louisville, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—Conditions in a business way in this section point to a more wholesome status than has been enjoyed for the past several months. All classes seem to be going about New Year's duties with more courage and hopefulness.

While there is no wide expansion of business interest and otherwise, yet confidence has taken the place of fear and uneasiness and there seems a determination on the part of all who expect to do anything at all this year to go ahead with successful operations.

It is noticed that farmers find it necessary to buy more mules. Several cars of mules will be shipped in here this year, while only one or two were shipped last year. The merchants throughout the county report a good Christmas trade and declare that their fall's business has been measurably satisfactory.

MRS. JULIA VEACH IS LAID TO REST AT ADAIRSVILLE

Adairsville, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—Mrs. Julia A. Echols Veach, an old resident of Adairsville, and widow of the late James M. Veach, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. N. H. Grady, Chattanooga, Tenn., after many years of suffering. The body was brought to Adairsville on the afternoon train and was interred at the East View cemetery today.

Mrs. Veach was 87 years old, and during her life was a very remarkable woman. Besides hundreds of friends she is survived by her daughter, Mrs. Grady, of Chattanooga, and one son, George Albert Veach, of Adairsville.

LOUISVILLE IN MIDST OF HOT POLITICAL RACE

Louisville, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—The otherwise quiet and very sedate town of Louisville, and until this year that same way in local political matters, is in the midst of a municipal race that will come to a close on Saturday, when the annual municipal election will be held.

The present administration is being opposed by another ticket that hopes to defeat the present officers, who have steered the town's affairs for the last several years with practically no opposition. A mayor and five councilmen will be elected. R. L. Bethea is the present mayor.

Odd Fellows Install.

Gainesville, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—The following officers who were elected recently for the ensuing term of Air Line Lodge, I. O. O. F., have been installed: R. W. Smith, noble grand; J. D. Hardie, vice grand; J. H. White, recording secretary; R. R. Robertson, financial secretary; W. H. Norris, treasurer.

Search for Negro.

Juliette, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—County officers are looking for Charlie Jackson, negro, who is charged with cutting his uncle, John Rich, to death at the latter's home at Danes ferry, near here. A negro who lives in Worth county, is alleged to have cut his uncle six times when the latter tried to separate Jackson and another negro, who were fighting.

AUTO ACCIDENT FATAL TO WORTH COUNTY FARMER

Moultrie, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—Harmon Sellers, Worth county farmer aged 67, is dead as the result of injuries that he received when struck by an automobile driven by William Gunter. The accident occurred near Minton, and according to Gunter and the passenger in the car it was unavoidable.

It was stated that Mr. Sellers was standing by the roadside in front of his home when the car driven by Mr. Gunter approached. The latter signalled with his horn. Mr. Sellers appeared to have heard it and the car's speed was not checked.

Just as it drew near the point where Mr. Sellers stood, the latter is said to have stepped out in front of it. The side of the car struck the aged man and hurled him to the ground, inflicting injuries which caused his death a short time later.

Mr. Gunter hurried for a doctor and everything possible was done for the victim, but efforts to save his life proved unavailing.

UNUSUAL ACCIDENT FATAL TO WORKER IN AUGUSTA SHOP

Augusta, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—An unusual accident occurred this afternoon at the shops of the Charleston and Western Carolina railroad when Oscar Walker, of the shop force, lost his life.

Walker was jacking up a freight car when the handle from the jack flew away from the equipment, striking the workman in the neck. The neck was broken and Walker expired in a few moments.

EMPLOY COUNTY AGENT Government Will Aid in Expense in Hall County.

Gainesville, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—The county commissioners have agreed to employ a county demonstration agent in Hall county for 1923. A committee from the chamber of commerce appeared before the commissioners last Friday and made request that this be done.

Professor Oliver, of the state college of agriculture, was present and told the commissioners that the interests represented by him would operate most heartily with the board and the people of the county in the work.

Twelve hundred dollars of the expense of a county agent is to be paid by the government through the state extension department.

YOUTH MAY DIE Accidentally Shot by Young Friend While Hunting.

Vidalia, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—Douglas Sikes, 14 years of age, is not expected to live following an accident while hunting with a companion, O. C. Collins, 12 years of age.

According to the story told by the boys, Sikes was walking through the woods when the Collins boy stumbled and fell, causing his shotgun to discharge.

The lead from the gun, discharged at such close range, made a terrible wound in young Sikes' chest just over the heart. He is at a Vidalia hospital, where doctors entertain little hope for his recovery.

Banks of Forsyth Declare Dividends; Conditions Improve

Juliette, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—The Citizens bank and Montrose County bank, of Forsyth, have declared dividends of 8 per cent and caused substantial amounts to the surplus fund and undivided profits account.

The county's financial condition is improving and the other banks expect to declare substantial dividends soon. The courtage of houses, and the fact that a larger percentage of the county taxes had been paid when the books closed December 20 than at the same date last year, although resources of the taxpayers are said to be less than last year.

Merchants report the biggest holiday trade in several years and there are many indications of improvement in the county along financial lines.

Stress Great Need For New Buildings In City of Waycross

Waycross, Ga., January 5.—Every effort is being made by the business men of Waycross to find some way to solve the housing problem here.

The city has for a number of years felt the shortage of houses, and the growth of the city has been impeded to a great extent. Early in 1922 a building boom was developing in Waycross when the strike put an abrupt stop to the building program.

With the business of the city recovering from the effects of the strike, public spirited citizens believe that the shortage of houses can be continued of building in the city.

A movement is on foot to get a number of citizens to combine and build a large number of houses. Five business men, Dan Lott, W. D. O'Quinn, P. R. Bomeliser, Mayor Covart and F. D. Hereford, already have agreed to build eight homes if five other men can be found to join with them in the building program.

Under this plan it is believed that contractors can be found who will submit low bids, and that material bought in large quantities can be secured at a lower price.

Chappell Is Named Member of Sumter Board of Education

Americus, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—Judge Z. A. Littlejohn, of Sumter superior court, Thursday named Walter Chappell, of Lysian district, a member of the Sumter county board of education. He succeeds Armisted Dodson, of Plains, who resigned several weeks ago.

Chappell has long been interested in the educational work of Sumter county, and while president of the board of trustees of Lysian district was instrumental in the erection of a handsome new $35,000 school building there.

Forsyth Masons' Elect.

Juliette, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—Strick Observatory lodge, No. 18, F. & A. M., of Forsyth, has elected officers for the ensuing year as follows: W. C. Hill, W. M.; L. G. Alexander, S. W.; O. P. Ensign, J. W.; G. L. Alexander, treasurer; J. P. Carson, secretary; F. B. Willingham, S. D.; E. W. Banks, J. D.; J. Tribble, Jr., S. S.; H. S. Worsham, J. S.; T. C. Gibson, chaplain; K. L. Hollis, tyler.

CHANGE OF VENUE ORDERED IN BANK CASES IN BAXLEY

Baxley, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—The cases of Dr. T. H. Comas, president, and J. V. Harmon, cashier, of the Baxley Banking company, recently induced by an Apping grand jury on several counts alleging misappropriation of the bank's funds, were called at the recess term of the superior court here this week, and a change of venue granted to the Glenn county court.

Judge J. P. Highsmith of this superior court circuit, was disqualified because of his relation to many of the depositors of the bank, and also because he might suffering from a gun shot wound in his arm.

Three counts were returned against Dr. Comas and four against Harmon. The cases probably will be called at the next term of the Glenn county superior court.

SHOT BY OWN GUN IN RUNAWAY, MAN MAY LOSE ARM

Waycross, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—K. S. Varn, whose home is near Hasty, Ga., was brought to Waycross last night suffering from a gun shot wound in his arm.

Mr. Varn was driving near his home yesterday afternoon when his horse became frightened at a passing automobile and lunged forward. The gun, which was resting across the knee of the driver, was discharged, the full load entering his arm.

His left arm was torn in two places by the charge, which severed important tendons and blood vessels. It is considered doubtful whether or not the arm can be saved.

Mr. Booth, a neighbor, was passing at the time of the accident and brought the wounded man to Waycross, where he received treatment at a local hospital.

Broken Back Fatal To D. L. McCarthy. Hurt in Auto Wreck

Waycross, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—D. L. McCarthy, whose back was broken in an automobile wreck on the Dixie highway near here two weeks ago, died late last night at a local hospital.

McCarthy, together with his brother and another man, were traveling at a rapid rate of speed, it is said, when their automobile turned over on the side of the road, pinning them underneath.

McCarthy was brought to a local hospital immediately following the accident, and an operation performed, but little hope was held for his recovery.

Perry, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—The board of commissioners of Houston county, composed of J. H. Watkinson, of Bonaire, J. Alva Davis, of Lakeside, and M. A. Smith, of Goshaw, held their first meeting today.

They elected M. A. Smith as chairman and C. E. Brunson, clerk. Homer P. Chapman was elected warden of the county, Dr. H. E. Evans, county physician, and J. R. Hearn, superintendent of the poor farm.

WAYCROSS TO INVITE LEGION COMMANDER

Waycross, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—Alvin M. Owsley, national commander of the American Legion, will be asked to deliver an address in Waycross on or about January 10.

The national commander will be in Jacksonville on January 11, and from there will go on a tour of Florida. Coming to Atlanta January 9 to start the statewide membership drive, he will pass through Waycross the next day, and it is the plan of the local legion post to invite the commander to stop in this city for the day January 10.

Elect School Trustee.

Americus, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—Voters of Thalean school district will choose a member of the board of trustees of Thalean academy Friday, January 26. The member will succeed William Chappell, who resigned Thursday.

Much interest centers in the election. Residents being considered for the place include H. O. Jones, John P. McMath, Charlie Williams, J. H. Myers, J. D. Eite, Henry Wiggin, A. A. Rodgers, W. A. Hunt and A. W. Smith.

ANDY GUMP LOSES ELECTION FOR CUP FOR BEST SERVICE

Anniston, Ala., January 5.—(Special.)—Rev. L. N. Claxton has been announced as the winner of the Exchange club loving cup prize at the hands of his fellow citizens. The Baptist pastor was elected to receive the coveted honor by an overwhelming vote over four other candidates nominated December 20 to compete for the cup for having performed the greatest public and useful service for the city of Anniston during the last twelve months.

The vote as given out after the final count at the Alabama drug store was as follows: Rev. L. N. Claxton, 875; Mrs. E. C. Berry, 49; J. W. Mallory, 44; Mrs. D. B. Walsh, 31; E. L. Turner, Sr., 3. Andy Gump received a complimentary vote of one ballot.

Mr. Claxton was awarded the Exchange club cup at the annual banquet and meeting of the luncheon club at the home of the retiring president, T. V. Ordway, the ceremony being one of extraordinary interest to the members of the local club.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

It is not seldom the case that a man who dedicates himself to the belief that he is suffering from some particular disease induces that disease by sheer effort of will, and suffers at last in reality what he has previously suffered in imagination.

Mr. Kilner had for so many years informed all and sundry that he suffered from an affection of the heart that that organ really began to be affected, with the result that such a great shock as that which was communicated to it at his arrest in the hall of his own house had the effect of almost entirely stopping its action.

In point of fact, Mr. Kilner never heard the fatal news until he collapsed at the foot of the staircase, and the police instead of carrying him off in the cab, as they had meant to do, were obliged to use the cab—which waited, all in readiness, at the garden entrance—for the purpose of fetching the nearest doctor.

It was evident by the most inexperienced eye that Mr. Kilner, as he lay breathing heavily in his hall, where glass cases filled with pike and trout of abnormal size and pictures of the chase bore witness to his love of sport, that he was much more likely to take his last journey of all than to be conveyed to Dublin.

When the doctor came he applied himself to bringing Mr. Kilner to a state of consciousness, and in order that he might not go off again from sheer fright at the presence of the police, he caused them to hide themselves behind a screen. It was a sorely afflicted Mr. Kilner who opened fish-like eyes on the doctor, and one who did not quite realize his position.

"I'm afraid I've had a stroke," doctor," said Mr. Kilner feebly.

"No, no, your heart is a little affected, my dear sir," replied the doctor. "A little weak, you know; not equal to sudden shocks."

"I always did suffer from a weakness of the heart," said Mr. Kilner. "And I've had a deal to try me." Here he began to remember things and to shed a few tears, especially on beholding his housekeeper.

"Oh, dear," he said, "to think of such a wicked charge as that being brought against me—one as the vicar has invited to be a church warden. It's scandalous!"

"None of us are free from the breath of scandal," said the doctor soothingly. "It's a blessing to be able to disprove the accusations which the wicked bring against us. Now, my dear sir, we must have you to bed."

"Then I'm not to go to prison?" said the patient, with a gleam of hope evident on his troubled eyes.

"Certainly not, sir; you're to be taken to bed," answered the doctor. "No prison for you. I couldn't think of it."

He got his patient to bed and ministered to him again, and after a time he went downstairs to the police, who were awaiting him in the dining room.

"What's all this?" asked the doctor, who was not yet in full knowledge of the position. "You can't remove him at present, you know, or I doubt if you ever can. Couldn't you have broken the news more gently—you've nearly killed him. What's the charge against him?"

"Murder, sir," answered the chief constable. "Two murders."

The doctor whistled.

"Whew-w," he said, his eyebrows elevated themselves. "The highly respectable Mr. Keene, who has been asked to be a church warden. Good gracious! Is it possible? Do you think there's any truth in it?"

"I can't say, sir. My instructions are by telegram from Dublin. Inspector Nicholson of the Liverpool police and Inspector Davidson of the Dublin force are traveling over by the day mail to take him in charge," said the chief.

"They'll be here during the afternoon. Do I understand that he can't be moved without danger to his life?"

"Oh, certainly you must understand that," answered the doctor. "If you attempt to move him to the police station he'll die on the way. You'll have to exercise great caution when the detectives arrive—the least shock will finish him."

Then the doctor went away, saying that he would call again later on, and promising to send a nurse, and all that could be done by the police was to leave one of their number in surveillance of the sick man, which feat was accomplished by installing him in an easy chair at the door of Mr. Kilner's room.

When the two inspectors arrived during the course of the day they were met by the chief constable and informed of the state of affairs. The trio repaired to Abouk's Lodge and had an interview with the doctor, who informed them that the patient was somewhat better, and was now fully aware of the charge that had been brought against him, but that it was quite impossible to move him at present.

He had been informed that Inspector Davidson was coming over from Dublin to take him in charge for removal to Ireland, and he had expressed a wish to see that officer on his arrival.

"I fancy," said the doctor, "that he wants to extract some information from you. He's a sly old dog—but there's no shamming about his heart. I wouldn't give two pence for his chance of life—even if he's guilty he'll never see the scaffold."

Then he offered to take Inspector Davidson upstairs, and at the door of the sick room warned him once more against giving the sick man any sudden shock.

"Now, then, Mr. Keene," said Inspector Davidson into the room, "here's the gentleman you wished to see—come to have a quiet little talk with you."

Mr. Kilner lay slightly propped up in bed. It was plain to the inspector that his prisoner was very ill indeed, and he could not help feeling very sorry for him. He went up to the bedside with a soft footstep and a sympathetic voice.

"Well, Mr. Kilner," he said, "I'm very sorry to find you like this."

Mr. Kilner's large countenance betrayed traces of emotion.

"I never thought, Mr. Davidson, that you and me, as was such friends in Dublin, would meet under such circumstances as this," he replied in a woe-begone voice. "It's a cruel, hard world, is this. I hope as you've had naught to do with the charge against me, Mr. Davidson?"

The doctor had left the room and the inspector had took a chair at the bedside.

"I'm very sorry to have been obliged to have to do with you, Mr. Kilner," he said, "but duty, you know, is duty. If you're an innocent man all you've got to do is to clear yourself of the charge."

Amusement is often accused falsely, Mr. Davidson," remarked the sick man. "It's none so easy, as you know, to answer charges like that. Fancy charging an honest, respectable man like me, as was to be a church warden, with the crime of murder? It's scandalous."

"Well, Mr. Kilner," answered Davidson, "if you feel and know your self to be innocent, you must refute the charge—that's all."

Mr. Kilner's fingers plucked nervously at the coverlet of his ample bed. He looked at his visitor out of his eye corners.

"I would like to know," he said, "what the charge against me is, Mr. Davidson. What is it that's been set up to my discredit?"

"The charge, Mr. Kilner, is that you murdered two men, Niman Baxendale and James Creighton, alias Richard Clay, at your house in lower Abbey street, in Dublin," replied Davidson, "and that you by that means became possessed of the diamond necklace which they had stolen from Miss Driscoll."

"Hark to that now," exclaimed Mr. Kilner. "Everybody, you included, Mr. Davidson, knows that I left Dublin because of this affection of the heart, and with as good and honest a character as could be given to any man. What should I have to do with thieves and such ruffians?"

"Mr. Kilner," said Davidson, "the bodies of these two men—or, rather, their skeletons—were found in the cellar of the house last night—I saw them myself."

Mr. Kilner betrayed no confusion. He had been prepared for this.

"I don't see that that matters, Mr. Davidson," he answered after a brief period of thought. "All that might have happened after I left the house—you can't say to a month, nor yet to a year, how long a skeleton has laid there. Why should I be mixed up with such a disgraceful affair?"

Davidson could not help smiling in his prisoner's face. Mr. Kilner reddened.

"I'm surprised at you, Mr. Davidson," he said, "laughing at me in such a serious affair as this—one that affects my name and credit. I asked you friendly-like to tell me what was set forth against me."

"I'm sorry I smiled," said Davidson. "Well, Mr. Kilner, you seem nicely able to talk, so I'll tell you. We know all about your connection with Clay, both in Leeds and Bradford. We know that you hadn't a penny when you came to Dublin. We know that Clay made your house his hiding-place when he disappeared with the diamonds. We know that young Baxendale entered your house and was never seen to leave it. We know that you left Dublin immediately afterward, after selling the good-will of the business. We know that you have been living here as a man of considerable wealth. We know, too, that the bodies of Clay and of Baxendale, murdered, have been found in your old house, Mr. Kilner," concluded Davidson, forgetting the doctor's advice. "We've enough evidence against you to hang 20 men. Come now, give up this affectation of innocence for your own sake. Make your peace, man, and tell the truth."

The effect of this appeal upon Mr. Kilner was not quite what might have been expected. He sat staring at his visitor while it was delivered, and once or twice gasped for breath. But he did not faint, nor collapse, and he spoke quietly.

"Mr. Davidson," he said, "I would like to see the doctor. And after that, sir, I would like to have a few more words with you."

The inspector went downstairs and sent up the doctor, who remained with his patient for some little time and then came back, bearing a note and a key.

"Mr. Kilner," he said, "wished one of you gentlemen—you, preferably, Inspector Davidson—to carry this letter and key to the manager of his bank in the town, whose address you will find on the envelope there. The manager, on reading the note, will permit you to open a small safe which Mr. Keene has kept in the strong room of the bank. In that you will find a sealed packet—you will give the manager a receipt for it and bring it back to Mr. Keene. Who will go?"

"I will go myself," replied Davidson. The doctor walked down the garden with him.

"I may tell you," he said, "that the man won't live till midnight. It isn't from any further shock—he's just sinking. You'd better be quick. I say—he is really guilty?"

"Not a doubt of it," answered Davidson, and sped off to the town. He came back again well within the hour and was told that Kilner had been asking for him. Going up to his room, he found the doctor administering a stimulant. Mr. Kilner looked at the detective inquiringly.

"Have you got that little matter you was good enough to fetch for me, Mr. Davidson," he asked faintly.

Davidson drew out a small package from his breast pocket—a package done up in brown paper and sealed with large red seals—and handed it to the sick man. Mr. Kilner's fingers closed upon it with something like avidity—he laid it on the bed before him and patted it affectionately.

"Mr. Davidson," he said, "the doctor here tells me my end is drawing nigh, and I'd like to make a good end, as befits a man that was asked to be a church warden. If you and Mr. Nicholson would step upstairs I've something to say to you."

Davidson fetched Nicholson from below. Mr. Kilner acknowledged the latter's salutation with dignity.

"I don't bear you any ill, Mr. Nicholson," he said. "If you hadn't met me the other day none of this unpleasantness would have happened."

But I bear ill-will to nobody—not even to you."

"Don't say too much," said the doctor. "You've something to say, you know."

"I have something to say," answered Mr. Kilner, "and I will say it. If one of these police gentlemen—as I was always good friends to when I had the power—would write it down."

"I'll take it down," said Nicholson, seating himself at a table by the bedside and producing a notebook and pencil.

"There isn't very much to tell," said Kilner, "but what there is you shall know of, and know it all. Write what I say."

"This is the truth about what took place at my late establishment in lower Abbey street in Dublin. Richard Clay, or James Creighton, by both of which names I knew him, came to my place one morning and said he wanted to be kept quiet for a bit, and I knew he'd been up to some of his games, but I didn't know what. He put on one of his disguises and he went about Dublin for a day or two, and as soon as he came I told him about Baxendale."

him—he lunched at the hotel where the robbery had been done opposite the lady he'd robbed and Davidson there, and they didn't know him from Adam—he was that clever at disguises.

"But I didn't know anything about the diamonds; he never told me a word. On the second day in comes a chap with a black patch over one eye, and after a bit of fencing about he tells me that his name was Baxendale and that he and Clay had arranged to get the diamonds and that Clay had played a trick on him, got them himself and cleared out."

"Baxendale had recognized him in my bar by the tattoo marks on his wrist and by the short finger on one of his hands. Baxendale was so mad with Clay that he proposed to me to go into partnership with him with the notion of clearing Clay out of the way and getting the diamonds for ourselves."

"I told him I'd think about it, and I locked him up in a private room at the top of the house, with plenty of whisky left him, and I waited till Clay came to make him comfortable. And there I in, and as soon as he came I told him about Baxendale."

At this point Mr. Kilner became a little faint and was obliged to ask for a stimulant. He presently recovered himself and continued the narrative.

"It was Clay who killed Baxendale in the little room at the top of the back stairs. Then, a little later on, Davidson there came inquiring about Baxendale, and I had to invent an excuse. But I was certain that Davidson would come back and search the house—though he never did—and I told Clay that we should have to get Baxendale's body out of the way."

"We carried it down to the bottom cellar between us. I knew of a sort of extra cellar beneath that where we could put him. We got him down there—and all of a sudden it flashed across me that if I could trap Clay there I had him and the diamonds, too."

"There wasn't anybody could live in that hole very long, and I knew there were swarms of sewer rats come in there that would have eaten a live elephant. And so I frightened Clay into stepping down there, saying that the police were at the door, and I ran up and I let the heavy fungstone down into its socket, and there he was—caged."

It was necessary to give Mr. Kilner a further stimulant. His memory at this point appeared to be giving him a great deal of trouble. But presently he went on.

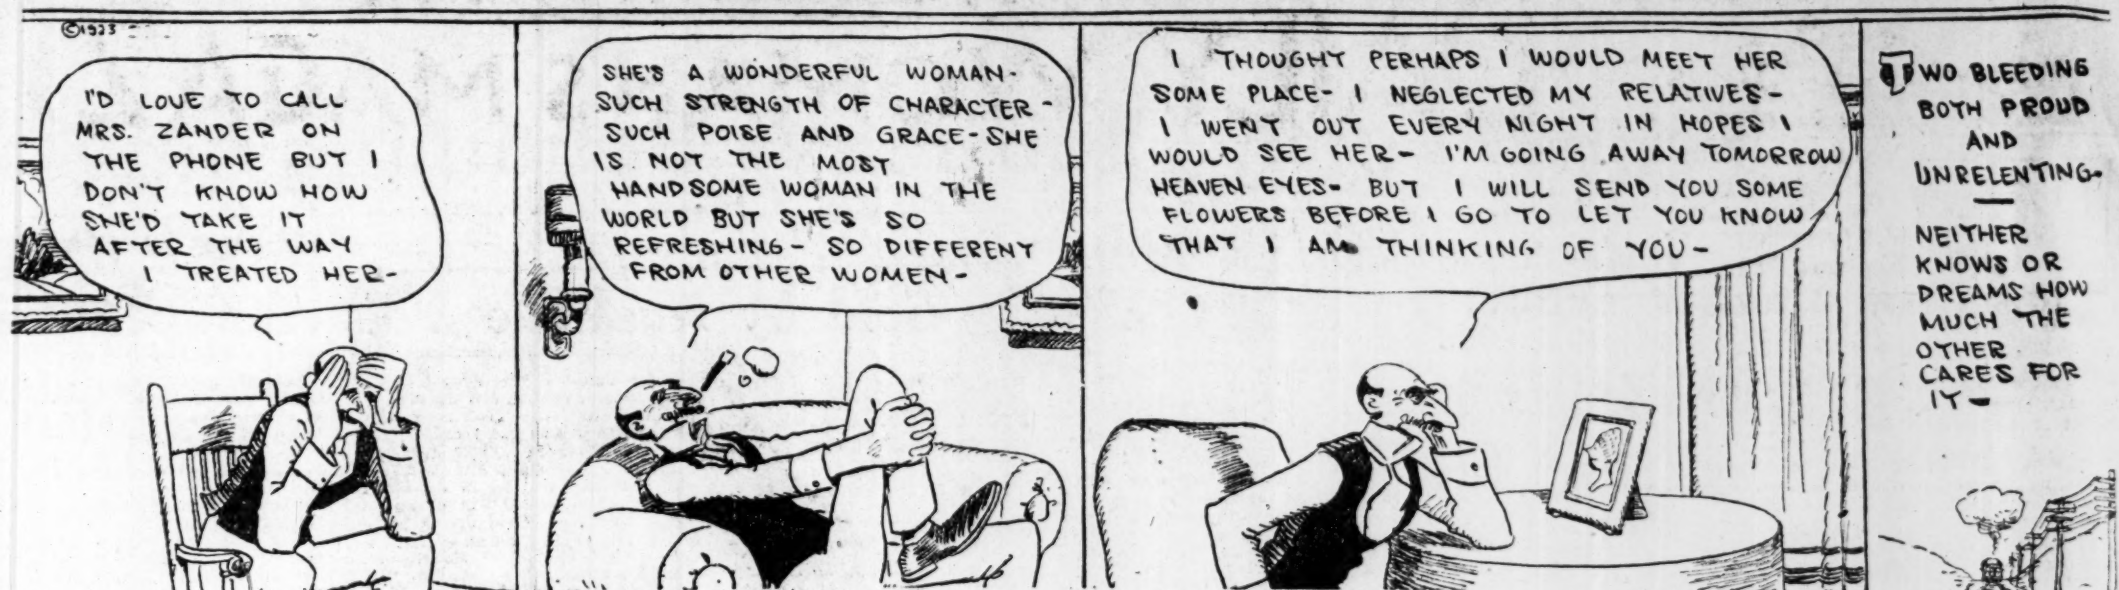

"I didn't go near him for as long as I could help. I kept off some time, 'cause, you see, I knew that rats wouldn't eat diamonds. At last I went. And this is what I want to say as the solemn truth. I'm accused of murdering Clay. I'm as innocent of 'Clay's' death as the child unborn. He killed himself."

"I swear that the real truth is that when I went down there to get the diamonds, which I knew he carried about his waist in a belt, I found that he'd shot himself through the head. That's the plain truth as to his death—it wasn't as he killed him. He killed himself."

Mr. Kilner paused and the three men who had listened to him stared at each other as if endeavoring to realize the state of the man's mind. He, taking no notice, but fingering the parcel on the bed, presently continued.

Home-Making May Disappear Says Mme. Olga Petrova

BY GRACE FISCHER.

"Writing is the greatest of the creative arts—it is lasting. And the greatest plays are those that are based on a theory."

Such is the opinion of Mme. Olga Petrova, the star of "The White Peacock," at the Atlanta theater this week, who is herself not an actress only, but a playwright who writes dramas never simply to amuse but always with a basic idea.

Intense Personality.
"The economic independence of women" is the theme in which she is most interested, she told me yesterday when I talked with her at luncheon in the Ansley grill. A woman of intensely attractive personality, tall and compellingly beautiful, in a jade green suit, trimmed with white fox, and a small white fox fur hat over wonderful hair of a reddish gold, she spoke in an intense manner about her ideas and her wide-open grey-green eyes looked very concerned as she spoke of the modern woman's impulse and how she herself came to have a stage career. As the lovely Polish actress talked of her own life and her ideas concerning writing and the trend of things today, I was impressed by her deep understanding and interest in matters intellectual. For one so strikingly beautiful, she seemed very interested in things of the spirit.

"The American man says that he goes to the theater to be amused. That is absurd. He thinks even if he doesn't know he does, and I believe in giving him something to think about. The theater and the moving pictures are the greatest elements in forming opinion today. The trouble is, so many people like to show nastiness and whitewash it. I am no prude. I believe that one must have vision in drama as in other forms of art. Every action has its reaction, and in my opinion, any situation may be presented in drama if the situation is carried to its logical conclusion. Do this and you will need no boards of censorship. As for plays to amuse solely, they are worthless. I like plays to amuse, but I like also to find an underlying vein of satirical truth."

She raised her slender fingers just a little, as it were to emphasize her opinion.

Independence of Women.
"But the idea is the thing, and the idea I am most interested in right now, and which is the basis for my plays, is that of the economic independence of women. What will it all lead to? Why, if this emancipation continues and the lower classes learn birth control, too, the home-making woman will go out entirely and nature, fulfilling itself, will come to an end."

She smiled a bit and her grey-green eyes looked thoughtful. "I should like," she said, "to come back and see woman a billion years from now."

Born in Poland, a country where, when she was a child, women were not economically independent, Olga Petrova at a tender age conceived the desire to be free. "My home experience was really responsible for my later career," she said. "I constantly saw my mother under the old world domination of my father, who was forever talking about 'my house,' 'my this,' 'my that,' and when I was seven years old I determined some day to have 'my' house. And I have it."

She digressed for a moment to smile at this idea and then continued to tell how as a mere child she had written lengthy dissertations on Darwin and had always felt the urge to scribble.

"When I was sixteen and a half years old I went on a tour around the world, and when I was seventeen and a half I became a reporter on 'The London Tribune'—as the first English newspaper woman! I became the fourth dramatic critic on the paper and was there for ten months. Then, because I wanted to make more than a pound a week, I went on the stage, my first role being that of Catherine in a presentation of 'Henry V.'"

Intention to Write.
"I later played with Sir Herbert Tree in London, but always I acted with the intention of saving my money so that I could write, not to amuse solely, to others' tastes, but as I myself believe and feel. That is the only kind of writing that counts, and now I can do that creative work according to my own vision. I never write a line that I do not mean. I am independent. I have 'my' house."

She reflected. "It's on Long Island. Not one of the show places, you know, but there are lovely trees, and when you go in there are chairs that you can really sit in, and a fire before which you can put up your feet in true comfort. Within my house you are at home and at peace."

As an after-thought this lovely woman added with a laugh: "Oh, I am a very bad actress indeed—I don't play anything that I do not believe—but I am a wonderful housekeeper! My cupboards are full of jellies!"

Mme. Olga Petrova, the home-maker, smiled.

Mrs. Colcord Is Honored

Mrs. A. R. Colcord has been appointed president of the Business Women's league of the West End Baptist church. This league is a new organization recently formed by the business women of the West End church. Mrs. Colcord will have as her assistant Miss Ella McLendon, and Mrs. E. M. Camp will act as secretary and treasurer. The league will meet the first Sunday in the month at the home of Mrs. Colcord, 97 Gordon street. There will be a meeting of the league next Sunday, January 7, at 3 o'clock, to which all business women of the church are cordially invited.

Birthday Party For William Asher

An enjoyable event of Thursday afternoon was the children's party given by Mrs. William Thomas Asher at her home on Ponce de Leon avenue in honor of the eleventh birthday of her young son, William Thomas Asher, Jr.

The house was effectively decorated with cut flowers, blue and white was the color motif carried out in the dining room where the beautifully appointed table held in the center a large birthday cake embossed in blue. Surrounding the cake were blue candles holding unshaded blue tapers.

Assisting William Asher, Jr., in entertaining were his mother, Mrs. Asher, his brother John Asher, his young sister, Mary Dena Asher, and Mrs. Edward Kline.

Little Elizabeth Thompson, who was also celebrating her eleventh birthday, shared honors with the young host, and cut the birthday cake for the guests.

During the afternoon, little Ruth Brooks did a fancy dance, and the children played games. Emily McArthur won the prize in the doll-dressing contest for the girls. Paul Stovall won the fishing contest for the boys.

Miss Kemp Is Hostess at Party

Miss Isabel Kemp, hostess at an informal bridge luncheon Friday at her home on Springle road, in compliment to Miss Rebecca Burrage, of McKinney, Texas, who is the guest of Miss Annie Foote at her home in Ansley park.

Twelve intimate friends of the hostess were invited to meet Miss Burrage.

Household Suggestions
Measure soda accurately, as the least bit too much will spoil a palatable dish.

For a Change.
When baking cup cakes, lift the top off and insert a spoonful of soft icing. Then replace the top.

Tarnish Removed.
A cloth dipped in ammonia, rubbed on the tarnished brass before any metal polish is applied, will brighten it quickly.

Avoid These Pests.
Pails used for scrubbing should never be put away until absolutely dry. This also applies to floor cloths and the scrubbing brush. Cockroaches are easily attracted to damp brushes and cloths.

Save Your Rain Water.
The old-fashioned rain barrel must have been a job to the washwoman, as with rain water much less soap is needed and the washing benefits the hands of the laundress, instead of harming them.

Plump, tender, thin-skinned, juicy morsels with all seeds removed.

State Women Voters Convene In Macon January 18th

Mrs. Minnie Fisher Cunningham will represent the National League of Women Voters at Macon, January 18. Mrs. Cunningham is a graduate pharmacist, at home was formerly in Texas. She is a niece of the famous Dr. Marion Sims.

At the convention of the Georgia League of Women Voters to be held in Macon January 18 and 19 the national league will be represented by Mrs. Minnie Fisher Cunningham. Mrs. Cunningham is the national executive secretary and presides over national headquarters work in Washington, with her finger constantly on the pulse of a league of more than two million women all over the country. She is remembered in Texas as a singer, a graduate of the school of pharmacy of the University of Texas, and as commanding general in the state campaign for woman suffrage. Though a native of Texas, she belongs through her grandfather to the Abernethy family of Georgia, and is a grandniece of the famous Dr. Marion Sims.

After the organization of the National League of Women Voters, Mrs. Cunningham was asked to take the position of executive secretary which she has ever since held. She retains all the charm of the traditional southern woman of the elder day and like the traditional southern woman of the elder day has been accustomed all her life to responsibility and to management. She speaks without effort, in an exceptionally well placed voice, and no woman in the country has a greater store of political knowledge to draw from.

Mrs. Edward P. Costigan, chairman of the committee on living costs, will also attend the convention. Mrs. Julian B. Saly, of Columbia, S. C., president of the third region, will be an important guest.

After the Georgia convention in Macon Mrs. Cunningham will spend the Florida state convention at St. Petersburg, January 22 and 23. Tennessee will receive her message at the Nashville convention on January 25 and 26, and South Carolina, first in the field, will be her host February 9 and 10.

Miss Marion Hamilton, of Johnson City, Tenn., is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Hugh Loker, at her home on West Peachtree street.

Mrs. Joseph F. Gajins, Jr., Joseph F. III, and Joseph P. Gajins, Sr., of New York, are at the Georgian Terrace.

Mrs. Ida Achenbach, of Orange, Texas, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. A. L. Fowler, at her home on West Eleventh street.

Mrs. George Lee, wife of L. L. Lee, Roswell road, was operated on for appendicitis Friday at the Atlanta hospital. Her condition Friday night was described as satisfactory by the hospital authorities.

Mrs. Hastings Is Hostess.
Mrs. Stanley Hastings was hostess at a most enjoyable bridge-party on Wednesday night in celebration of Stanley Hastings' birthday.

Mrs. Robert Ramspeck and Mrs. H. G. Hastings won the top score prizes.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Murphy Candler, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Barwell, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Hastings, Mr. and Mrs. Dan White, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ramspeck, Mrs. Charles Wesley, Miss Adelle Everhart, Louise Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Akeley, Raymond Hastings and Don Hastings.

HOW TO SAVE WHEN SHOPPING
By Ruth Leigh

When you are buying a garment or material by the yard, you are particularly concerned if it is of a dark color, with whether the material will crock and whether it will withstand perspiration. Here are some very simple tests that will help you.

If you want to try out the relation of any color to perspiration, all you need do is to dip a sample in some warm acetic acid and dry it between blotting papers. Do not rinse the sample after dipping it in the acid.

To test the dye for permanency and to be sure it will not crock, take a small sample and rub it on a piece of pure, clean white material. Rub it very hard. If the dye in the material is poor, it will come off easily on the white material. In buying a coat or a suit, it is especially important to make this little test, if not with a sample of the lining, then with the lining itself. This will avoid spoiling dresses or waists worn beneath the coat.

To tell whether the color is fast, put a sample in a window for two weeks, with half of the piece covered. If the color changes on the exposed part, you may be sure that the material will not stand much wear without fading.

Delta Tau Delta's Give Dance at Druid Hills Club

An event of wide social interest among the younger college contingent was the formal dance at which the members of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity entertained Friday evening at the Druid Hills Golf club.

The dance was the closing event of the southern division conference of the fraternity and assembled about 40 society belles, representatives of all the conference, and members of all the Pan-Hellenic councils in Atlanta.

The young ladies invited included: The Misses Irene Thomas, Florence Boykin, Correll, Varnum, Mary Hill, Blood, Mary Shelden, Mary Sadler, Theodora Owens, Frances Cooper, Julia Garner, Elizabeth Barrett, Erskine Jamigan, Ruth C. C. Major, and others.

Adair Center Meets Friday Night

The regular meeting of the Adair Community Center was held in the auditorium of the George W. Adair school Friday evening. This was the postponed December meeting of this community center and finished up the year's work. Activity is the keynote of this community center. During the year the center has been busy in having the city and county officials which were invited was sponsored; more ground for the Adair park and having a wedding party held on it have been secured; a Boy Scout troop has been organized and a scout hut built for them.

Many other things of a public nature have been successfully carried out and a general review of all these was given at the meeting.

During 1923 a program of expansion has been mapped out and will be given at the community meeting.

After the business session Ollie Reeves presented an excellent program.

This community follows the idea of having some program each meeting and depends for its talent entirely on the community members.

Mrs. Banks Gives Lovely Luncheon

A beautiful social event of Friday was the seated luncheon given by Mrs. W. N. Banks at the Piedmont Driving club.

The table in the rose room, where luncheon was served, was covered with a lace cloth, and graced in the center by a large urn of pink geraniums, resting in a bed of sunflower and pink roses. Silver candelabra holding pink unshaded tapers were placed at either end of the table. Attractive white cards bearing the hostess' monogram marked the guests' places.

Mrs. Banks received her guests wearing a gown of black crepe embroidered in gold and old blue. Her large black velvet hat was trimmed in gold.

Courses were laid for twenty-five guests.

Debutante Club To Meet Wednesday

Miss Pauline Ware and Miss Julia Memminger will be hostesses to the Debutante club on Wednesday, January 10, when they will entertain the members at luncheon at the Georgian Terrace at 3 o'clock.

A business meeting will follow the luncheon.

Winter Eggs, By the Bushel

Mrs. Holsach Tells How Don Sung Made Her Hens Shell Out Eggs.

"In October, I started giving Don Sung to our 50 hens. It promptly brought them from 2 eggs a day up to 23 a day. My next $1 box brought them up to 36 and 38 a day right through January. Now (Jan. 1, 1923) I am using the $1 box and I expect it will bring them up to 45 or even 50 a day. Our hens are in the best condition and the eggs are the largest and finest we ever had."

Northey dozen eggs a day, for Mrs. Holsach, in November, December, January and February. Not a bad increase for hens that were only laying 2 eggs a day, is it?

She started just as we are asking you to start, by accepting this offer. Give Don Sung to 15 hens. Then watch results for 30 days. If it doesn't show you a big increase in egg production, your money will be promptly refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg laying) acts directly on the egg-laying organs and is beneficial in every way. It makes hens healthy and happy and keeps them laying regularly in any season, in any weather, when eggs are scarce and high. Can't afford to ignore the wonderful reports you are hearing from Don Sung users everywhere? Why not let us show you the same results, with your flock? Don Sung is no trouble to use. It costs nothing to try. All we ask is a chance to prove our claims. At our risk. Get Don Sung from your local dealer, or send 30 cents for package by mail prepaid (large size, $1, holds three times as much). Burdell-Dugger Company, 214 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

WIFE MAKES PLEA FOR BANKER GREEN

Tells Members of State Prison Commission Husband Has Already Suffered Enough for Crime.

Hearing held by the state prison commission Friday morning on the application for parole of William B. Green, former vice president and cashier of the Fairburn Banking company, and now serving a five-year term on the charge of embezzlement of the bank's funds, developed unexpected drama when Mrs. Green, wife of the convicted man, injected herself into the proceedings.

Mrs. Green stepped to the commission's bench after counsel for the parole plea had announced that her case was closed.

She told the commissioners, briefly, how anxious she was for her husband to regain his freedom and declared that he had already suffered tremendously for the one false step which had wrecked a previously unimpeachable career. After a brief intermission, her emotion overcame her and, breaking into sobs, she was led from the room by Attorney J. L. Camp, of Fairburn, and Dr. A. J. Green, her brother-in-law.

Devoid of Sensations.
This act of forgiveness by the wife who had suffered doubly in the entire case—suffered because of her husband's disgrace and suffered because of the other woman, Mrs. Catherine Queen Bradstreet, for lure of whom Green was declared to have committed his embezzlement—was the end of a hearing almost entirely devoid of feature.

There was but little opposition to the plea for the parole. Attorneys Stephen Arnold and Troutman & Troutman, who were of record as desiring to oppose the petition, failed to appear, and the only protest was filed on behalf of the Fairburn Banking company by President J. H. Longino and Secretary George Edmundson. This set forth that Green had taken over $100,000 of the bank's funds and had caused much suffering.

The application for parole was accompanied by petitions signed by every official of Campbell county, by officials of the town of Fairburn and by nearly 1,000 citizens of the county.

Said He Had Been Bound.
The crime for which Green was convicted formed one of the most sensational cases in the criminal annals of the state. He was working in the bank alone one night in March, 1920, when a fire broke out in the building. He declared that he had been held up, bound and gagged, the safe looted and the building fired by robbers.

Investigation of the case, however, showed that he was short over $800,000 in his accounts, and that he had for months been recklessly lavishing money, automobiles, clothes, jewelry and furs upon Mrs. Bradstreet, of Atlanta.

He was indicted on numerous counts and finally convicted and sentenced to five years imprisonment. Other indictments are still pending against him. Of that term, two years have been served, several months at the state farm, and the rest on the Atlanta county chain gang, where he is now.

DELTA TAU DELTA MEN MEETING HERE
More than 100 members of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity are attending the southern division convention, which opened at the Piedmont hotel Friday. The southern division embraces chapters in all states from Washington to Texas, and in addition to the delegates a number of state alumni are present. A general business program featured the initial session Friday morning with a discussion of individual chapters during the afternoon. A formal dinner was given Friday night at the Druid Hills golf club, and there will be a banquet today at the hotel. Memorial services for members who have died since the last conference feature today's session.

Youngest Plaintiff Seeks Big Damages For Mother's Death

One of the largest suits ever filed in Georgia against any one concern, in behalf of one of the youngest plaintiffs on record has been filed in the Coweta superior court against the Columbus Electric and Power company for a total sum of $100,000 in behalf of a 9-month-old baby, Marion Reaves, its father, T. M. Reaves, brothers and sisters who live near Opelika, Ala., and two Atlantans, G. W. and L. S. Deener, as a result of an automobile accident which occurred October 28, 1922, when the mother, Mrs. Elma Reaves, was killed and others injured.

The accident occurred on the McColm road near Newnan, Ga., when the car in which Mrs. Reaves, her husband, child and the Garners were riding, collided with a wagon trailer owned by the electric company, the impact throwing Mrs. Reaves from the car to her death and seriously injuring the other occupants. The petition declared that negligence of the wagon driver was responsible for the accident. The suits were filed by Judge J. R. Terrell, of Greenville, Ga., and Lawton Nalley, of Atlanta.

DIAMOND BROOCH LOST

Valuable Keepsake Sought by City Detectives.

The loss of a valuable crescent brooch set with sixty diamonds was reported to detectives Friday morning by Mrs. E. F. McKenzie, 87 Peach tree place. A reward has been offered for its recovery.

Mrs. McKenzie stated that she went in a downtown department store to try on a dress and missed the brooch immediately as she left. "I hardly know how to estimate the value of the brooch," Mrs. McKenzie stated, adding that it was a gift from her husband about twenty-five years ago.

The loss of 20 packages of smoking tobacco, 30 boxes of snuff and two jars of stick candy was reported by W. J. A. Britt as the result of a store at 104 Walker street being burglarized some time before daybreak Friday morning.

Thieves gained entrance by "jimmieing" the door after breaking the lock.

While Germany has decreed that "Deutsch Uber Alles" shall henceforth be the national anthem, the international commission of Coblenz has decided that no more than before will it be tolerated in occupied territory.

GEORGE TO SUPPORT EDUCATION MEASURE

Will Fight for the Sterling-Towner Bill If States' Rights Not Endangered.

Constitution Bureau, Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, January 5.—(By Constitution Leased Wire).—Inquiries from a number of Georgia people regarding his position on the pending Sterling-Towner bill, which proposes to create a federal department of education, resulted in a statement today by Senator Walter F. George of Georgia, in which he declared he would support the measure provided it could be perfected so as to not encroach upon the rights, powers and duties of the several states.

As the bill has not yet been reported out by the committee, Senator George said it was not possible at this time to say just what provisions it will contain.

"If the bill to be voted on does not encroach upon the rights, powers and duties of the states, does not vest authority in the federal government to dictate the course of study, the methods and practice, terms and requirements, directions and full control by state authorities as to the management of schools, I shall favor its passage," the Georgia senator asserted.

Reviews Measure.
Reviewing the main features of the measure as presented Senator George's statement continues: "The bill proposes to create a department of education, to authorize appropriations for the conduct of said department, to authorize the appropriation of money to encourage the states in the promotion and support of education."

"The bill does not provide any standard or authorize the secretary of education to prescribe any standard; on the contrary, it is provided, with reference to each of the purposes for which appropriations are authorized, that the state and local educational authorities of said state shall determine the course of study, plans and methods of carrying out the purposes of this section within said state in accordance with the laws thereof."

Local Jurisdiction.
"It is further provided that all the educational facilities encouraged by the provisions of this act and accepted by a state shall be organized, supervised and administered exclusively by the legally constituted state and local educational authorities of said state, and the secretary of education shall exercise no authority in relation to the same."

thereto; and this act shall not be construed to imply federal control of education within the states, nor to impair the freedom of the states in the conduct and management of their respective school systems."

"There is, as the bill now reads, no warrant for the statement made by those who have not carefully considered its provisions that there is to be set up a federal standard of education which the states must comply with before they can share in appropriations made by congress."

"It is optional with any state as to whether or not it will accept the benefits of the act and appropriate for any or all of the particular purposes mentioned in the bill an amount of money equal to that appropriated by congress and appropriated to the state under the terms of the act."

"The bill has not yet been reported by the committee, and it is quite impossible to say when it will be reported and what provisions it will contain to be finally voted on."

Two Nominations For Postoffices In Georgia Made
Constitution Bureau, Raleigh Hotel.
Washington, January 5.—(By Constitution Leased Wire).—Nominations for two Georgia postoffices at Albany and Waynesboro were sent to the senate today for confirmation. Jesse L. Dann was nominated for the office at Albany, and Edgar Bargeson at the second Georgia city.

Eligible for three other Georgia postoffices, as a result of civil service examinations held recently, were also announced today as follows: Harvey C. Bunn, Edward H. Myers and Harry M. Wilson for the office at Waycross; Oscar L. Owens, James L. Griffin, Jr., and David M. McKee for Moultrie; and Oscar L. Dewberry, Mark A. Greene, Jr., and Walter B. Brock at Tallapoosa.

The offices pay an annual salary of $3,000, $2,900 and $2,800 respectively, the last two of which are rated as second class.

PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION WILL ENLARGE FORCE

When the Georgia public service commission meets in its first regular meeting next Tuesday, one of the most important subjects to be discussed is the enlargement of its operating force as provided for under the Brantley reorganization bill. A division for auditors, appraisers and engineers, and a shorthand reporter, is provided.

The announcement of this pending business was made Friday by Chairman Trammell. It is understood that in all probability no fulltime positions will be created, but experts in their various lines will be selected and retained subject to the call of the commission.

The Consumers Gas and Coke company, of Waycross, filed application Friday for authority to increase rates claiming it is now unable to pay its taxes owing to heavy losses during 1922.

The entire commission will go to Rome on January 16 to hear the case pending there involving gas and service rates.

Deadlock Must Be Broken Or Europe Will Collapse

A situation fraught with inconceivable menace to Europe and the rest of the world is rapidly approaching the final crisis, all the dispatches from Europe agree. Certain officials do not hesitate to say that the Entente will end if France takes military measures before the conclusion of the discussions in the Premiers' Conference at Paris.

From the administration at Washington comes the statement quoted in the New York Herald that the reparations question is at the root of financial trouble in Europe. In addition, this government has intimated that until the reparations are settled on a reasonable basis, it is idle to expect that any aid the United States desires to extend can avail. And American newspapers hold that the deadlock on reparations is a big obstacle to the resumption of prosperity here, and hence affects every one of us.

What, then, is a "reasonable basis" for reparations and why all the difference of opinion even among former allies? That some impatient Americans appear tired of hearing about the matter, has been evident for three years, but that we need to gain some comprehensive view of the facts is more and more obvious. Remarks like "Why don't they all get back on the job?" or "If they'd use a pick and shovel more and a typewriter and a megaphone less, we'd feel more like canceling debts," may express the view of much of our press comment, but do not help the problem.

The leading article in THE LITERARY DIGEST this week presents France's claims. It shows the actual damage which France suffered by the war; what France has done since the armistice to help herself; how much Germany has paid in reparations. The information in this article was obtained by the editor of THE LITERARY DIGEST in Paris from the French Government and French press-reports, supplemented by information supplied by the American Committee for Devastated France, and from the French Consulate in New York. It is of the most definite and authoritative character obtainable and must be considered if one would understand the reparations question which is the core of all the conferences, negotiations, and disputes now agitating Europe and America. The article is profusely illustrated with half-tone photographs, charts, and maps. Other news-features in the January 6th DIGEST are:—

OLD POULTRY

Monroe, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—A great deal of interest attaches to the first annual Walton County Poultry show, which will be held in this city Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week. An attractive list of premiums was recently issued and the indications are that the show will be the biggest thing of the kind yet staged in this section of Georgia.

Realizing that with the prevalence of the boll weevil other money crops have been forced to the foreground, the Walton County poultry people entered the poultry industry last year, and the result that much interest has been inspired to try this year.

Few counties in north Georgia can boast of more pure bred chickens than Walton, and the number is growing all the time. Several thousand dollars have been spent by men in and around Monroe in promoting the industry, and fully as much interest has been shown in other sections of the county.

Practically all breeds of pure bred poultry are represented on the display farms, and the industry bids fair to add much to the revenue of the county.

Several hundred of the finest chickens will be on display at the coming show and various committees are at work to get the best of the season's crop of real benefit to all in attendance.

The poultry show is the outgrowth of the recent organization of the Walton County Poultry association, which is headed by Ordinary G. A. Garrett is president, with the following officers: Vice president, R. S. Murphy; secretary and treasurer, J. H. Jones; assistant secretary and treasurer, R. C. Foster.

NEW MINISTER TO BE INSTALLED AT GRACE CHURCH

Rev. C. J. Broder, formerly of West Frankfort, Ill., will be installed as pastor of the Grace Lutheran church next Sunday. The services, which will be held in the morning at 10 o'clock, will be conducted by Rev. Broder, who will officiate at the installation.

Rev. William Wedel of Pascagoula, Miss., will officiate at the installation services. The congregation was organized in 1922 by Rev. Reuter, of Birmingham, Ala.

Rev. Broder is a minister of wide experience, having served as a missionary in Cuba and South America. The officials of the church are R. C. Lieb, O. G. Herford, L. W. Olick and H. E. Vogel.

Mrs. Rebecca L. Felton, the first woman to receive a commission to the United States senate, was the guest of honor at a luncheon given at the Kimball House Friday noon by a group of friends and admirers.

During the course of the luncheon the former senator was presented with a bouquet of roses. She made a brief speech and wished her well-wishers the compliments of the season.

Among those present at the luncheon were: Rev. and Mrs. Warren Mosby; Miss Margaret Davidson; Miss M. H. McKim; Mr. and Mrs. T. T. Rowland; Thomas A. Avery; Mrs. S. Guy McDaniel; Dr. R. B. Adair; and J. Henry Lynch.

Old Administration Meets With Defeat In Hogansville, Ga.

Hogansville, Ga., January 5.—(Special.)—Hogansville has just passed through the most serious campaign for city office in the history of the town. Mayor J. F. Askew, a prominent banker and extensive farmer who has been in office for ten years, was defeated by J. H. McLean.

The following were elected councilmen: B. F. Rosser, R. B. Briscoe, C. C. Nall, H. C. Ector, Dr. C. S. Burden. The following were elected city officers: Mayor, J. H. McLean; City Clerk, Dr. C. W. Harvey; D. G. Reid.

All are prominent and influential business men, and under their administration the people of Hogansville are expecting great improvement in civic affairs.

Committee to Report Capper Measure In Senate Saturday

Washington, January 5.—Preparation of farm credits legislation virtually was completed today by the senate banking committee, and to-morrow the committee plans to report two bills, the Capper measure and the McNary amendment, for government aid for consideration in the senate next week.

Senator Capper, republican, Kansas, chairman of the senate farm bill committee, will introduce the McNary amendment by the committee to extend the war finance corporation until March 31, 1924. As tentatively agreed to by the committee the McNary amendment would establish a credit department with an aggregate capital of $90,000,000 in government funds.

Flying Circus Will Advertise Landing Field

Mabel Cody Will Perform Daredevil Stunts in the Air in Near Future.

A flying circus featuring Mabel Cody, niece of the late Buffalo Bill, is scheduled to perform in Atlanta within the next fortnight, for the purpose of stimulating interest in the municipal flying field.

The circus which is under the command of Major E. Leonard, of the British Royal Air Force, is being brought to Atlanta under the auspices of the Atlanta Aero club, which is headed by Van H. Bergin.

The personnel of the organization includes, besides Miss Cody and Major Leonard, Lieutenant J. R. Taylor, Lieutenant A. E. McLean, instructor at the American flying field during the world war, and Lieutenant Barney Reel, all American army aviators.

Miss Cody is the only woman in the country, Major Leonard said, who changes from plane to plane at an altitude of 5,000 feet and makes a parachute jump from that altitude.

The ships used in the mid-air feat of Miss Cody are Curtiss J. N-4s painted white. The circus is said to be the only successful venture of its kind operating in the United States today.

Mr. Bergin and Lieutenant W. F. Sutton, of the Atlanta Aero club, will review motion pictures of the circus at the city hall, showing at the Howard theater Saturday.

The ships will take off and land on the municipal flying field.

COOPER RIDICULES KAUFFMAN'S CHARGES

Chairman of Viaduct Committee of Bond Commissioners Defends Engineers.

Ridiculing the charges made Thursday by City Engineer C. E. Kauffman, to the effect that the Spring bridge, which is being constructed in an improper manner and that it would prove entirely unsatisfactory if allowed to be completed under the present plans, Walter G. Cooper, chairman of the viaduct committee of the bond commission issued a statement Friday, in which he defended the engineers submitting the plans, and the commission for approving them.

As a result of Mr. Kauffman's charges, however, Mayor Sims sent a telegram to John L. Harrington, of Kansas City, who drew the plans, requesting him to attend to the bridge committee of council next Thursday.

The bridge committee of council has invited the plans received by the city board of consulting engineers to meet with it. The matter will then be thoroughly thrashed out, it was stated. Mr. Kauffman carried the approved plans to the city hall, where the height of the bridge will be too high; that its durability is limited, and that it would be taxed greatly by more than 12 tons passed over it.

Mr. Cooper, in his statement, declared that the bond commission approved the plans, had given Mr. Kauffman an opportunity to be heard, and that members had not been impressed with his criticisms. The plans were examined by L. W. Wray, Jr., consulting engineer, and pronounced satisfactory before they were accepted by the bond commission, Mr. Cooper stated.

In addition to Mr. Robert's endorsement, the city board of engineers, who will answer Mr. Kauffman's charges at the meeting next Thursday, asserted Mr. Cooper's statement.

"Mr. Kauffman's criticism of the plans," said Mr. Cooper, "will be answered by the engineers approving them. They have built bridges almost all the way from the city to the river zone at a cost totaling several hundred million dollars, and much of this work was done for railroads, whose officials are supposed to be judges of engineering. The city committee have no information going to show that an error has been made in the plans which have been approved by the bond commission and the city council."

NEXT GOVERNOR PAYS VISIT TO MAYOR SIMS

Governor-elect Clifford M. Walker will pay a visit to Mayor W. Sims Friday and extend his best wishes for a long and prosperous administration. Two executives pledged to one another the fullest cooperation between city and state government at all times in the future.

CONKLIN MAKES TALK TO BUSINESS CLUB

Walter E. Conklin, Atlanta architect, was principal speaker Friday at the weekly luncheon of the American Business club at the Peacock cafe.

Mr. Conklin told of the responsibilities of the architect and the various phases of the business that required the most careful attention of the architect. In contrasting the modern structures with those of the olden times, Mr. Conklin stated that beauty in design and simplicity of construction found in the ancient structures in Greece and Rome had been improved upon but very little, if at all, but that modern architecture catered to the demands of the day, and has been completely revolutionized as has all other arts.

C. E. Johnson presided over the meeting in the absence of Dr. C. C. Aven, president of the club.
